Trudeau calls it quits

Trudeau waves after dropping resignation bombshell at Ottawa press conference

Surprise announcement stuns Liberal faithful

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau stunned his own party today by announcing he is quitting as Liberal leader after almost 12 years so the party can "rebuild itself" and win the next election.

The surprise resignation of the 60-year-old Trudeau will likely not be effective until March, his suggested date for a leadership convention.

Trudeau informed Senator Alasdair Graham, Liberal party president, early this morning that he intends to quit. Liberal MPs and senators, gathered for their weekly caucus meeting, were then informed. Some broke into tears and followed Trudeau crying to a hastily-called news conference.

Trudeau told reporters the Liberal party needed to rebuild itself and the best way to achieve that goal is to have "a change in leadership."

But he promised that "wherever I am and whatever I do, I will continue to fight for my country" and will participate actively in the Quebec referendum campaign this spring.

Senator Graham, his voice choked with emotion, said he believed that support for the Liberal party has been growing since the May 22 election that ended 16 years of Liberal rule. He wanted Trudeau to remain as leader.

The national Liberal executive meets in Ottawa this week and will choose the date for the convention.

Former finance minister John Turner declined immediate comment on Trudeau's decision to step down.

Turner, 50, has been mentioned frequently as a possible candidate for the federal Liberal leadership.

Reporters flocked to his downtown Toronto law office immediately after the announcement.

But Turner sent out word that he has nothing to say at this time.

Turner quit the Trudeau cabinet in 1975 without giving a clear reason for his action. In 1976, he resigned from the Commons and later was critical of the Trudeau government's economic policies.

Turner, who became finance minister in 1972, made one of his rare political appearances last weekend at a policy convention of the Ontario branch of the federal Liberals in Toronto.

He stood at the top of an escalator at a downtown hotel and shook hands with dozens of people.

Asked at the time why the Liberals lost the May 22 federal election, he said: "You know as well as I do but you won't hear it from me."

He also said he knows as many people in the Liberal party as any person except perhaps Paul Martin, long-time Liberal cabinet minister and high commissioner to London.

After Turner left the government, he sent a regular newsletter to a selected group of persons from his law office at McMillan and ★ Federalism Trudeau's undoing?

By KITTY MCKINSEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau, the 60-year-old Montreal intellectual who seemed so young when he burst onto the federal scene in 1965, says it's time for someone else to take up his fight against separatism in Quebec.

After years as a vociferous critic of the Liberal party, he came to Ottawa as a Liberal MP in 1965 to show Quebecers they had a place in the federal system.

Ironically, as he leaves federal politics, the separatist threat looms larger than ever and critics say Trudeau exacerbated the situation through his rigid federalist stand and inability to compromise.

In the dying days of the May 22 election Trudeau, still preaching the national unity theme of his first election, was almost begging voters to give him one more chance to deal with Quebec.

That the voters turned instead to boyish rival Joe Clark, a man Trudeau never took seriously, had to be a severe disappointment to a man who's seldom failed at anything in his life.

After his almost chance entrance into politics — the Liberals were chasing Jean Marchand, who wouldn't come to Ottawa without Trudeau and Gerard Pelletier — the Montreal millionaire's son became the darling of the media and of adoring women who showered him with roses and kisses wherever he went.

The swinging bachelor justice minister who wore an ascot and sandals to the Commons and took the state out of the bedrooms of the nation, won the Liberal leadership almost effortlessly in 1968.

His youthful charisma and vague promises of a Just Society coincided perfectly with the optimistic mood sweeping the country the year after the Centennial and Expo '67.

The mercurial Trudeau has always confounded ob-

Anti-U.S. flames race through Moslem world

Times News Services

A firestorm of anti-U.S. violence raced from Iran to Pakistan today, endangering hundreds of Americans in several Moslem cities. At least one American was killed.

Iranian students said they would kill 49 American hostages and blow up the embassy in Tehran if the United States tried to rescue them by force.

Islam's holiest city, Mecca in Saudi Arabia, also was caught up in the flames when gunmen seized the Grand Mosque.

Shortly after, hundreds of thousands of Islamic militants, chanting "Down with the dog Carter," stormed the American embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, burned the U.S. cultural centre and the American Express building in nearby Rawalpindi, sacked the U.S. consulate in Lahore and attempted to march on the U.S. consulate in Karachi but were turned back.

Mobs also burned the British library in Rawalpindi.

A Marine guard was killed as the Moslems poured into the Islamabad embassy compound and as many as 110 other Americans barricaded themselves in a third-floor vault until they were evacuated from the roof by Pakistani troops.

The troops battled the besiegers, some of whom were armed with rifles and shotguns.

At the cultural centre, students put up posters of Khomeini and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

The U.S. State Department blamed Ayatollah Khomeini for "mischief-making," and President Carter ordered the aircraft carrier Kittyhawk to the Indian Ocean.

Earlier, Carter hinted for the first time the United States might use force to free the hostages in Tehran.

The carrier Midway, also of the Pacific Fleet, is operating in the Arabian Ocean despite completing naval manoeuvres in the area Monday and in Norfolk, Va., the U.S. Atlantic Fleet today was reported reinforcing the "helicopter capability" of the Pacific Fleet.

A spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet said without elaboration, "We are augmenting our helicopter capability in the Pacific Fleet."

He conceded that the Atlantic Fleet doesn't normally become involved with the Pacific operation, but is doing so and the reason appears to be the Iranian situation.

The wave of violence broke out Tuesday on the 1,400th anniversary of the birth of Islam.

Indian affairs revamp

QUEBEC (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp has announced radical changes that will reduce the Indian affairs department to a support agency for 300,000 Indians across Canada.

"A radically different approach to economic development is necessary because . . . we have failed to help Indian people help themselves to create and hold jobs," Epp said in a speech to Indian leaders and department officials.

Text of the speech was released in Ottawa prior to delivery.

Epp also announced increases in annual subsidies for Indian housing to eliminate a chronic backlog of 4,600 new units and 6,000 major repairs. No figure was mentioned but the current subsidy is $12,000 per unit and the federal budget for Indian housing is $40 million this year.

A major housing policy is expected next year.

Gloves off labor urged

By MIKE HUGHES

VANCOUVER — Trade unionists were told Tuesday it is time to take the gloves off in their fight with governments over unemployment and jobless benefits.

Bill Zander, president of the provicial council of carpenters, said organized labor has been "too god-damned political".

"It is time we got off the public relations kick when we make reference to the fat little porkchoppers we elect, like Joe Who?," he told the B.C. Federation of Labor convention. (Other convention stories on page 3)

Zander told the 850 delegates it is time labor became more forthright in its attacks on the current unemployment situation and recent cutbacks by the Tory government on unemployment insurance beneifts.

"I don't know how you equate human misery in terms of statistics," he said, adding that unemployed people are having to sell their homes and everything else they own.

"I think we have to start mobilizing the unemployed."

"Let's get together and help the bloody issue."

Zander said Prime Minister Joe Clark is to be in Vancouver Thursday "and if we don't give him the invitation he deserves, then we are missing the boat."

This call to action was given a standing ovation.

Clark is to be in Vancouver for a fund-raising dinner.

The delegates approved a 12-point program for continuing the federation's attack on unemployment.

A resolution was also passed giving the federation authority to order the federal government to roll back the latest changes in unemployment insurance benefits and scrap proposals for further cutbacks.

It was also resolved that the federation, in cooperation with the Canadian Labor Congress, intensify its all-out attack on government assaults on the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Bennett shuffling on tippy toe

By JAKE BANKY

No one questions that Premier Bill Bennett's cabinet is overdue for fresh faces and new approaches.

And some weeks ago it had been expected the premier would shake up his ministers thoroughly in the new cabinet announcement expected Friday.

But the indigestion caused by the unappetizing "dirty tricks" affair may well cause Bennett to pass up the political pizza-with-everything and settle instead for a blander diet.

With the "dirty tricks" affair still sputtering away, Bennett cannot afford to add to his troubles by alienating any faction within his government or his party.

He must consolidate, retrench and recover. The boat must not be rocked.

What can be expected then is not the major cabinet reshuffle the government needs but an exercise in pre-Christmas window dressing.

Without pretending to fit all the right pegs into the right holes, here are some educated guesses on what will and — just as important — what will not happen:

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy will not be slapped down for her mishandling of "dirty tricks" in the premier's absence.

She is far too popular with the party and any attempt to put Grace on the skids would bring an immediate upheaval in the Socred power structure.

What is likely is that Bennett will uproot her from human resources, where she has never bloomed, and replant her in tourism, where she thrived in the past.

Although that's a step down in portfolio she will still retain the title of deputy premier, and that's where the real power resides.

Bill Vander Zalm will not be shifted from municipal affairs. Like McCarthy, he is too popular and also is in the middle of a major rewriting of municipal legislation.

Appointing a new minister would mean that project would come unglued.

Bob McClelland likely will not lose his health portfolio. Although McClelland's handling of hospital finances and labor problems gave the NDP much of its most potent ammunition in the May election he probably will remain, if only because Bennett doesn't know what else to do with him.

Jim Hewitt keeps energy because Bennett wants a marionette, not a minister.

Don Phillips retains economic development because the premier is impressed by noise and the illusion of action.

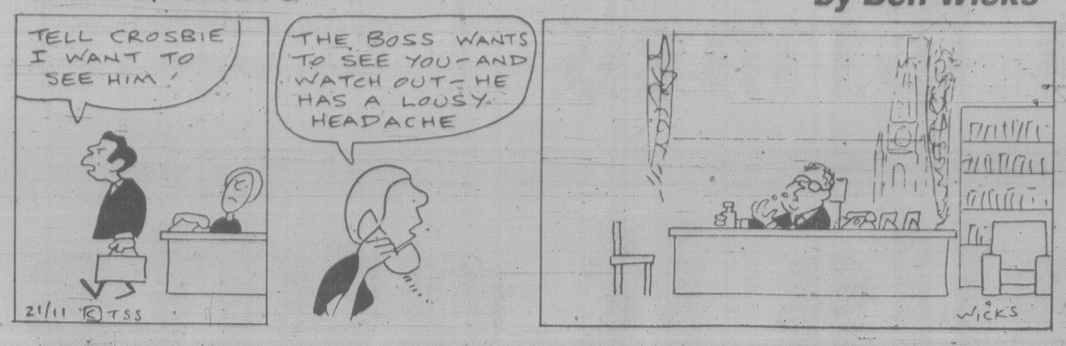

Jim Nielsen keeps consumer affairs for no apparent reason whatsoever.

And Garde Gardom will remain as attorney-general

THE OUTCASTS — by Ben Wicks

Tension in Zambia rises

LUSAKA (AP) — A government-owned newspaper warned Zambia's whites today they would bear the consequences of continued Zimbabwe Rhodesian attacks against Zambia.

"We must warn that if the British do not tame the rebels (Zimbabwe Rhodesian troops) and stop these acts of sabotage the war will be fought at the doorsteps of the white people in the country," The Daily Mail said in an editorial. "It will be a clean-up exercise and there will be no commander to order the ceasefire."

The editorial came one day after President Kenneth Kaunda ordered a full mobilization of his armed forces in response to stepped-up air and ground attacks by Zimbabwe Rhodesian forces against the Zambian bridges and roads that link the landlocked country with the outside world.

Some whites were openly concerned about their safety and considered plans to leave the country. One diplomatic mission advised its subjects to keep a low profile during the crisis.

Lusaka, the Zambian capital, was tense overnight as rumors of renewed Zimbabwe Rhodesian attacks swept through the city. Chinese-built MiG jets of the Zambian air force were flying protective missions over the capital, but it was not known whether they have encountered any aircraft from Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Britain's peace conference now is trying to arrange a ceasefire in Zimbabwe Rhodesia after reaching agreement on the holding of national elections that would give the guerrillas a chance to be represented at the polls.

In London, the Commonwealth High Commission in London Tuesday unanimously expressed "a sense of outrage over recent (Zimbabwe Rhodesian) bombing raids on Zambian bridges and other vital economic installations and their resulting loss of life."

The statement issued by the Commonwealth secretariat went on: "Whatever their motivation these attacks do not assist the process of negotiation in Lancaster House or the wider cause of peace in southern Africa."

Meanwhile, Britain turned down at the Zimbabwe Rhodesian peace talks Tuesday a counter-proposal by the black nationalist guerrilla alliance calling for a large peacekeeping force during a ceasefire before new elections in the African territory.

The rejection, coming in the 11th week of talks between warring parties, prompted Herbert Ushewokunze, a senior delegate for the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, to tell reporters: "We are not here to rubberstamp British treachery or chicanery. We will not be bulldozed into a settlement."

No risk of snow

Bright skies and sunshine here will soon give way to wind and rain for a few days but there's no risk of the snow that has hit the Sooke Hills.

Forecaster Norman Dressler says temperatures will remain mild below 5,000 or 6,000 feet despite deteriorating conditions brought to the coast by a Pacific front.

Frontal cloud was moving in today, bringing the first of the rain and wind.

Dressler said the cold layer last week had been at around 10,000 feet, but it dropped unexpectedly at the weekend, resulting in five inches of snow as low as the 2,000-foot elevation behind Jordan River.

$500 GRANT HOMES BUILT PRIOR TO 1961

As of April 20, 1979, the federal government has increased the Canadian Home Insulation Program (CHIP) grant to $500 on all homes built prior to 1961. money and programs to Indian bands to stimulate economic development at the local level and to help eliminate unemployment ranging from 75 to 90 per cent on some reserves.

Epp said the Indian Act, which prescribes how Indians are to be governed, will be amended to expand band powers. Delivery systems would be reworked to allow bands to design their own programs and some federal legislation might also be required.

About 750,000 Metis — of mixed Indian-white blood — and non-status Indians not protected by federal legislation, are not affected.

"I must emphasize that these policy changes are not going to come about without difficulty and a transition period," Epp said. "They will not come about overnight and they will not happen without mistakes."

Obstacles to be overcome include broad federal-provincial agreements decisions made by other departments that adversely affect Indians, Epp said.

The Indian local-government program has been evolving since 1965. This year 519 of 573 bands are administering $227.2 million or 34.5 per cent of the program budget, he said.

Epp said that the department's paternalistic approach makes it insensitive to Indian needs.

That led to an "Indian-versus-government" conflict that drastically affected policy development.

That was emphasized in several economic development studies completed within the last three years. The latest of these was the Beaver report made public three weeks ago.

Beaver, former president of Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp. Ltd., said that the archaic approach of managing Indians' affairs had not lessened Indian dependency on government services.

Beaver also said that no amount of reorganization within the present system would improve the delivery of those services.

The proposals were greeted with both praise and skepticism by spokesmen for two Vancouver Island bands.

Philip Paul, chief of the Tsartlips, said he thinks Ottawa and the Indians are still poles apart in terms of jurisdiction and autonomy.

He said if turning over more authority means giving it to the provinces, this is not the solution to Indian problems.

Paul said unless jurisdiction is given directly to the bands, Ottawa will be "stirring up the whole thing again" without improving Indian status.

he said in the past, a big bureaucracy has hampered Indian development.

Some increase in local autonomy had been granted to bands without a comparable increase in funding, he said, adding this is like being given a job to do but no tools.

Cowichan Indian band chief Dennis Alphonse said it is his personal view that Epp is moving in the right direction and in line with the thinking of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs.

Alphonse said his band has about 10 years of experience in administering programs including education, housing, social welfare and community services.

He welcomed further enlargement of band powers through Indian Act amendments, citing two areas of major concern: The development of Indian lands for commercial or industrial use, and meeting housing needs.

the weather

A vigorous frontal system accompanied by strong gusty winds and rain just off the north coast will push southeastward to give rain across the south coast today. Interior regions will be affected as well with rain or snow beginning in the northern interior today and reaching the southern interior Thursday. Conditions will remain unsettled behind the disturbance. For the next few days a moist southwest flow across the province will give mostly cloudy skies with showers.

Penny saver making cents

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value of gold and the Canadian dollar doesn't worry Frank Ogden, a public relations man and self-proclaimed futurist, because the good money is in pennies.

Ogden is advertising to buy pre-1947 pennies, offering to pay up to two cents for a one-cent coin which he says can only increase in value.

"I think that pennies are going to go out of production (because) it's costing the mint two cents to mint them," he said in a recent interview. "Israel and Hong Kong have gone out of pennies."

If the coins go out of production, their value will increase as collectors around the world begin to covet the rare Canadian penny, he said.

Pierre DeBane, former federal supply minister, said in February that the federal government lost $9.5 million in 1978 because of high mineral and production costs of pennies and nickels. He said it cost two cents to produce a one-cent piece and about six cents to produce a nickel "and that can't continue."

Ogden said the government planned to issue a smaller penny in 1977 to defray the cost of the coin, but that was shelved.

"So somewhere in Ottawa there may be a mini-penny or plastic penny ready to be issued," he said.

Chances of pennies becoming rare are questionable, however. The Royal Canadian Mint produced 1,154,173,556 pennies in 1976 and 1977 — that's $11.5 million worth of pennies.

But even if their worth as collectors' items are slim, Ogden said the copper content of the penny will likely increase in value, making a penny worth far more than its face value.

Ogden noted that the silver content in Canadian dimes, quarters and 50-cent pieces in coins minted before 1967 is worth much more than the actual coins themselves.

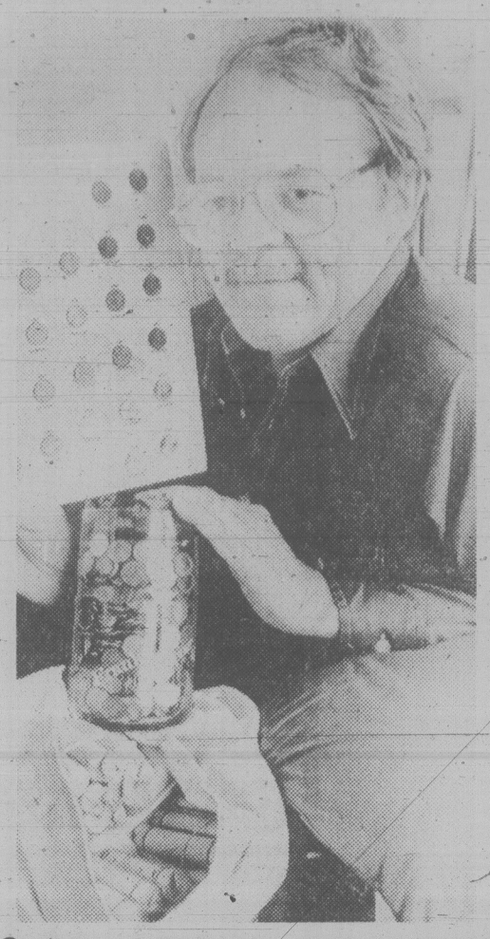

"I'm saying that, on a smaller scale, the same thing is going to happen to pennies," Ogden said, adding that even if the price of copper doesn't skyrocket, the coins will still be worth their face value.

"This is sort of the poor man's gold. You'll never get rich, but there's no risk of loss."

Meanwhile, commodities expert Arthur Ahearn of Midland-Doherty warns that it could take some time for penny-hoarders to cash in.

Although the commodity price of copper has jumped from 87 cents U.S. on Oct. 15 to $1.02 U.S. on Monday, it's still too low to bundle up your pennies and heave them into a melting pot, Ahearn said.

"Copper has to be worth from $1.50 to $1.60 a pound before it's worth smelting," said local coin-dealer Benny Lee.

Airport grants approved

The B.C. government has authorized $172,000 for improvements to four small airports, the transportation ministry has announced.

The ministry said a $25,000 air transport assistance grant is being made to the Powell River Regional District; $35,000 to the Village of Qualicum Beach; $12,000 to the Skeena-Queen Charlotte Regional District and $100,000 to the Atlin Board of Trade.

National unity petition response 'fantastic'

TRAIL (CP) — A one-night blitz of homes in two West Kootenay communities has produced an overwhelming response in favor of Quebec remaining in Confederation.

The blitz of homes in Trail and neighboring Warfield was conducted by organizers of the People to People national unity petition.

National co-chairman Keith Cowan of Victoria said the 4,000-name response to the petition was a model example of what Canadians can do to strengthen national unity.

"I would have to say that what I have seen here has just been fantastic," said Cowan. "These two communities have shown that there is a big voice in the small towns of Canada saying that Quebec should remain part of our country."

A local committee spent four months preparing for the assault on area homes Monday by about 130 canvassers.

The campaign is being carried out in several Canadian centres.

The petition — in English and French — acknowledges that Canada's two cultures have not received equitable benefits from Confederation, but that working within its framework for improvements is more desirable than Quebec's separation.

Barrett lashes oil firms

VANCOUVER — Governments should stop pushing working people around and start taking on the multinational oil corporations, NDP Leader Dave Barrett told the B.C. Federation of Labor convention Tuesday.

"I'm tired of millionaires telling me I've got to tighten my belt — it's time they (oil companies) tightened theirs," he told the delegates.

Barrett said from 1978 to 1979, Shell Oil profits rose 66 per cent while their effective tax rate dropped to zero in 1978 from 43 per cent in 1974.

Texaco profits increased 48 per cent while effective tax dropped to 16 per cent last year from 38 per cent in 1975, he said.

"The more money you make the less taxes you pay and (Alberta Premier Peter) Lougheed and (B.C. Premier Bill) Bennett are defending this," he said.

"Had any trade union gone to the bargaining table demanding this kind of deal, they would have been laughed out of the room.

"Bennett and Lougheed speak for the oil companies when they attack the east. This country is too important to have western chauvinists — the Sheik of Alberta and the me-too-clerk of B.C.," Barrett said.

Barrett said he is disappointed in the simplistic attempt by Lougheed and Bennett to attack working people in other provinces. He was referring to Lougheed's attempts to get world-level prices for Alberta oil and Bennett's subsequent statement that he sees nothing wrong with this position.

Barrett said it would be nice if the people of Alberta got the benefits from the increased prices, but the international oil companies are the ones who will profit.

Percentage in unions said low at 35-40%

VANCOUVER — One of the main reasons public sector unions in Canada don't get enough public support is that only 35 to 40 per cent of blue and white collar workers are organized, a Canadian Labor Congress spokesman said Tuesday.

CLC executive vice-president Julien Major said those percentages compare with 85 to 95 per cent of those workers who belong to unions in countries like Britain and Sweden.

He told the B.C. Federation of Labor convention that if a higher number of blue and white collar employees were unionized, they would understand what it means to have to negotiate with an employer.

"I say that when we have a majority of those workers in unions, the public sector will have the support of a majority of the people as they do elsewhere."

He said federal legislation must be changed to make it easier for workers to organize into unions.

Major also assured the B.C. labor leaders that the majority of Quebeckers do not want to separate from the rest of Canada.

"Like most progressive people, they want a new deal with and within the rest of Canada.

"They don't want to separate. The workers want to remain united with you."

Mr. Goldman . . . You're A Wonderful Buyer!

If I didn't tell you I am a great buyer, who would? (but I am, really) . . . With the holiday season on the way, and if you're thinking of clothing, there's no better time, for 2 reasons. First, our suppliers produce the finest name brand clothing both in Canada and Europe. Secondly, our prices have never looked better. So come on in, you'll see . . . Murray

YES, GOLDMAN IS ON YOUR SIDE THIS CHRISTMAS

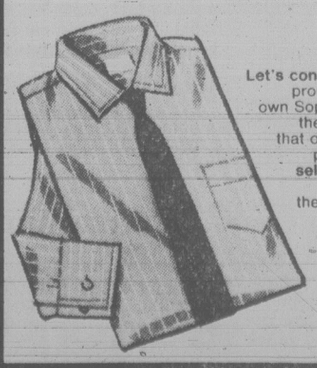

THIS IS SOME SALE THURS., FRI. AND SAT.

Here we go. I managed to pick up 1,000 pairs of dress slacks from several top clothing houses who must remain nameless (oh, you know, Mr. nameless) from flannels to worsteds, some gabs and tweeds, but definitely 100% all wool. Choose from plain or pleated front in belt loops or extension waistband. Honest to goodness $60 value — your price, $33.

I know you're waiting with bated breath to hear about my suits, so listen. We bought them right from several manufacturers we're proud to be associated with. So help me, regular values on suits to $295, even some $325-$375 . . . your price (get ready) a very tempting $188, and when you consider tailoring, the fabrics, and mostly 3-piece vested styles, take my word for it, this is a bargain, sir.

Am I getting to you? Now we come to sport jackets and, oh, how I wish I could mention the maker's name . . . great fall tones from rugged Harris tweed to fine wools. We bought them right and offer you a generous 20% discount on every jacket in the store. (you're amazing, Mr. Goldman)

Let's continue. Italy is proud of their very own Sophia Loren and their dress shirts (in that order) and we're proud of our Italian selection of shirts, plain and stripes with the new shorter collar. Reg. $25 and $30 value at just $13.88 (when you consider the cost of my plane trip to Italy, the price is right).

Ever feel the luxury of a silk shirt? (No, not on your gal, sir) on your own body — it's just great. Our Shrewd buyers (that's me) picked up mounds of 100% silk shirts, all shades, at just — ready — only $38 (Murray, how do you do it?)

Quite a story, eh? Our shelves are bulging at the seams with sweaters, sweaters and more sweaters . . . and, oh, so magnificent — from Italy, England and France. The shades and styles are absolutely outstanding (control yourself, Goldman) . . . all at a pre-Christmas 20% off on every sweater in the store including cashmere. (Tell me you like me).

O.K., now, let's talk about gowns. (No, it's not a "drag"). I'm talking about dressing gowns. Short gowns, mid length, full length and Monk robes (with hood, yet) . . . from cottons to wools to soft cuddly velours (now, I'm talking to the ladies). I didn't make a special buy but still offering a 25% discount on every gown in our store (call it a Christmas present from M.G.).

And, for the big finish, let's talk about topcoats, and raincoats, from name brand in wools, tweeds, to cotton and cotton blends in fashion raincoats and top coats . . . and we'll tempt you with a whopping (brace yourself now) 25% discount on any coat you choose. That's my story, so come on in — I'll wait for you . . . Murray.

and a Good Evening to you, Mrs. Johnson — M.G.

About that centre

Tomorrow Premier Bill Bennett will turn the first shovel of dirt to mark the beginning of construction of Victoria's waterfront convention centre.

It is still a dream come true for Victorians, but at the same time the planning of the centre appears to be turning into a bit of a sleepwalker's fantasy.

Local Victoria politicians and businessmen have been urging a convention centre for almost a century. No one doubts the creation of a proper centre will improve the city's economy and go some way towards smoothing out the seasonal boom-bust cycle of the tourist industry each year.

All the same, planning for the convention centre is showing signs of becoming increasingly convoluted and confused. Somehow involved in the proposal are a loosely-organized group of local businessmen, the provincial government, the Provincial Capital Commission, perhaps the federal government, and, supposedly, Victoria city council.

But if any of them knows exactly what is going on, the others certainly aren't being informed.

City council, for example, is quite mystified as to why the provincial government has suddenly decided to have a sod-turning ceremony. Even Mayor Mike Young, who is also a member of the Provincial Capital Commission, doesn't know. He hopes optimistically that perhaps either the province or Ottawa wants to give the centre some more money and needs a big ceremony at which to do it.

He agrees, however, that the city is still somewhat in the dark about the precise nature of the project for which the sod is being turned. Although the over-all concept, modified several times in the past year, is quite acceptable to the city, no detailed plans or drawings been made available to council. Indeed, as far as Young knows, no detailed plans or drawings exist.

Neither is a secure financing formula in place.

The province has promised $2.5 million in capital costs. The city once approved building a $1.5 million parkade and picking up half the operating deficit each year, but that was when the province was offering to pay the other half of the operating deficit rather than provide a one-time capital grant. Just how the formula is now expected to work has not been made clear. Moreover, Young adds, another $2.5 million to $3.5 million will be needed to complete the capital construction.

There was a discussion at one point of tying the convention centre in financially with the operation of the renovated Crystal Gardens. Nothing has been heard about what happened to that idea or whether it is still in the works.

The whole planning process seems less than firm for a project that will have a massive impact on the local economy and also occupy one of the last prime pieces of Inner Harbor waterfront land in Victoria.

The public has never been given any say in the location or the design of the centre. Because no rezoning is necessary, the project has been inching ahead without any public consideration of what is the best design or even whether the Reid site is the best possible location.

It appears that the city has been unwilling to jeopardize provincial support for the project by asking too many questions. It's not too late yet but, as Young himself says, council must work closely with the Capital Commission and the province to ensure that the city has an appropriate opportunity to participate in the detailed planning process.

Victorians are pleased that the province is going ahead with the centre; now, after the symbolic sod turning ceremony, they deserve a voice in the construction of a building that will be with them well into the next century.

Passing of history

A moment of silence to mark the death of two Victoria pioneers in the past few days.

Marsh Gordon, who died Monday at the age of 89, was one of the most distinguished members of the B.C. bar, a national expert on administrative law, and one of the longest-serving lawyers in the province. He began his legal practice in Victoria in 1916.

George Rogers, who died last weekend at the age of 75, was a pioneer farmer of Saanich. The family dairy farm in the area of Christmas Hill was one of the best-known in the municipality. The family will be remembered by the street, Rogers Avenue, which runs off north Quadra.

With the passing of these two men, a part of today has become Victoria history.

Peace coming to Rhodesia

LONDON — British Airways is making preparations for the resumption of direct flights to Salisbury, Zimbabwe Rhodesia, perhaps within a week or two, reflecting a remarkable diplomatic achievement about to be concluded here.

By the end of this week, it now appears, the essential negotiations will have been concluded for a ceasefire in the Rhodesian guerrilla war, for a brief transition period under British supervision, and for an all-parties-election to give Zimbabwe Rhodesia by early next year its legal independence and a genuine-majority-rule-government.

Few foresaw such a success when, more than two months ago, the new British Conservative government convened a conference including both the government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa and the Patriotic Front parties that were conducting guerrilla warfare against it. In the years since the white minority in Rhodesia illegally declared its independence from Britain in 1965, all such efforts at negotiation had failed.

British talks should mean ceasefire and end the Rhodesian war.

Pressures mounting

This year, moreover, the black-led Muzorewa government had replaced the white minority regime through what appeared to most observers to be fairly conducted elections. Pressures were mounting in both Britain and the United States for recognition of that government and for the lifting of economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

As now can be seen, the moment was nevertheless ripe for a settlement. The Muzorewa government had grave weaknesses, not least a constitution imposed on it by the white minority, which retained essential powers in white hands and thus prevented other black African states from recognizing the new regime.

The Patriotic Front parties, representing huge numbers of Rhodesian blacks, had remained out of the elections and out of the government. The guerrilla war they were waging from sanctuaries in Zambia and Mozambique was continuing to tear the country apart and drive out the whites. International sanctions, as well as the war, had produced severe economic strains.

But the front, too, had its troubles. It had not been able, as threatened, to prevent or disrupt last spring's elections. Its principal backers — the surrounding "front-line" states of Zambia, Mozambique, Botswana, Tanzania and Angola — were badly strained. Landlocked Zambia's economy was in shambles; Mozambique and Zambia were suffering from savage retaliatory strikes by Rhodesia's proficient Security Force.

Tanzania had heavily engaged its scarce resources in Uganda, after having invaded and toppled Idi Amin from power. A new government, leaning toward recognition of the Muzorewa regime, had come to power in Britain. In the United States, strong political forces were working against "terrorists" and for recognition of an elected government, however deficient.

Over this situation hung the spectre of Cuban forces and Soviet ambitions in Africa, countered by the anti-Communist, white supremacist government of South Africa. If the war in Rhodesia persisted, it might draw the Cubans and the Soviets behind the Patriotic Front, and the South Africans into opposition, and force the Western powers into a cold war confrontation in southern Africa. In such a confrontation, the West would surely be seen elsewhere as opposing black nationalism and lining up with the white colonialists.

The pressures of the war and world opinion on Muzorewa and the white minority, the pressures of the front-line states on the Patriotic Front, the threat of British and American recognition of the Muzorewa regime — all appeared to have brought agreement within reach. The major remaining problem, after substantial concessions on both sides, is the "separation of forces." This requires, in a British view still resisted by the Patriotic Front, the establishment of base areas where guerrilla forces will be quartered during the cease-fire.

Still many problems

Even when such final details are worked out and the plan goes into effect, the operation will be precarious. The British interim governor will have no real forces of his own. How the Security Force and the guerrillas will conduct themselves during a ceasefire and a political campaign remains to be seen. Whether the losing side ultimately will accept the election results is even less certain. The Patriotic Front parties, led by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, are themselves rivals for power, and it may be that no black party can win effective control of the new government. Nor is it clear how South Africa would look upon the accession of a black nationalist government on its northern border, particularly if that government were not sufficiently anti-Soviet to suit Pretoria.

On the other hand, a peaceful transition and the successful establishment of an internationally acceptable government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia might encourage South Africa to accept similar arrangements for Namibia, where independence negotiations have been stalled for a year. That would go far to defuse southern Africa as a potential East-West battleground, although leaving untouched the region's deepest problem — the oppressed and disenfranchised black majority in South Africa itself.

Nurses' bargaining

I am one of many nurses employed by the Capital Regional District and wish to protest in the strongest possible terms about the intolerable delay in resolving the dispute between the Capital Regional District and the local Registered Nurses Association of B.C. bargaining unit.

Since our contract with the district opened on March 31, 1979, the nurses have displayed patience and a most reasonable approach to the negotiations. With the refusal of the district to bargain in good faith, the RNABC requested on July 9 to have the dispute resolved by binding arbitration under the Essential Services Dispute Act. The regional district responded negatively to this request and appear to have adopted a "head in the sand" approach and attitude to this process. This has done nothing but aggravate the situation and certainly does not enhance future harmonious employee/employer relationships.

Following this rejection by the regional district of this process, the Labor Relations Board was asked to rule on the matter pertaining to the rights of the nurses to seek settlement through the services and the regulations of the Essential Services Dispute Act. Failure to obtain an early resolution of this problem can only be interpreted as a failure of the effectiveness or even the necessity for such legislation which Labor Minister Allan Williams considered important at the time of introduction. — F. Rushton, 3354 Biscoe Drive.

Was the International Year of the Child just a nice name to give to 1979 or have we made some progress in awareness of the child as a human being?

On the plus side are ads such as the one on child abuse published by the B.C. Government Employees Union in a recent issue of the Times.

Other pluses, to those of us who look upon the fetus as a developing child, are the decision of a judge in Northern Ireland that "an unborn child has the right to sue for damages when born" (the Times, Nov. 3); and the ruling by Judge Peter Millward in Victoria that a fetus in the process of birth is "a person" (the Times, Nov. 7).

But what of the inconsistencies in our attitude towards children? We work hard to encourage traffic safety, good nutrition and cleaner air and water for our children. But, under the convenient umbrellas of "free enterprise" and a fear of censorship, we permit the sale of drug apparatus and literature which glamorizes drugs.

We worry about the kind of education our children receive at school, but what about the education they get from TV? Are we really helpless to do anything about the violence, cheap sex and drivel that comes over the air waves?

Can we condone the use of artificial insemination, with its potentially grave dangers to posterity, so a couple can have a "child of their own" when there are so many children who need foster homes?

Isn't it inconsistent that there are so many laws designed to protect the rights of every element in our society: the criminal, the drug-addicted, the mentally handicapped, except the most helpless, the human fetus?

To assure the well-being of the child there is much yet to be done. — J. E. Richey, Victoria.

Nitpicking

Regarding the letter on Nov. 9, in your newspaper from T.A. Sellgren regarding Mayor Brian Smith's absence from the annual Oak Bay Hallowe'en bonfire. Would he not think that Mr. Smith's presence at the caucus meeting was vastly more important to the people of his riding than attending the fire? I am sure he is very conscious of his duty as mayor but I would think that the situation Mr. Sellgren refers to needs the resolution that only the physical presence of our MLA could give. Incidentally, I understand that Mr. Smith did a yeoman's job in his place as did Alderman Doug Watts and Neil Swainson do yeomen jobs.

I really cannot think that such a nitpicking attitude on Mr. Sellgren's part warrants space in your letters-to-the-editor column. — C.J. Clayton, 572 Island Road.

Right to live

Having just attended the lecture and seminar last weekend, The Right to Live and the Right to Die, at which Dr. Everett Koop was the principal speaker, I was surprised to find that the coverage your paper gave the event was zero.

Victorians have a right to be informed about the abortion, infanticide and euthanasia issues pro and con and your paper has a duty to provide this kind of information. — Rev. Fr. Gleb Jensen, Parish Priest and Rector, Holy Theophany Orthodox Church, Victoria.

Parks board

I am sure that the majority of citizens will support Bernice Packford's views against incursions into the "natural" state of Beacon Hill Park, as expressed in her letter to your columns Nov. 7.

Near her conclusion, she properly laments ". . . that the process continues irrespective of who the current parks board chairman may be". Victoria does not have a "Parks Board." One alderman (already busy with city council affairs) carries an additional role as chairman of a parks and recreation committee.

Victoria desperately needs a publicly elected parks board. A "parks commission" (presumably appointed by council) — as was suggested by one aldermanic candidate — would not suffice.

At the time of civic elections, Vancouver elects city council, school board and parks board. Parks board membership can be a good training ground for aldermen and provides a useful public service role, per se.

In Vancouver the parks board is responsible for a host of district community centres, for summer and winter recreation programs and for much else. Notably they keep and add to open space for the public; the English Bay and Point Grey foreshores are happy examples.

I would suggest that voters ask the new aldermen and mayor to push through a separate, publicly elected parks board in this capital city. The current arrangement of a committee of council is inadequate. — Clare McAllister, 302-118 Croft Street.

Only city

Only in Victoria you say?

It must be a source of merriment all the way to Glasgow that Victoria is the only city in Canada where the patrons call upon their symphony to play "God Save the Queen".

However, as one of the proles who does appreciate symphony music, I can assure that I was not the only one who refrained from such an infantile exercise. Certainly, if I thought there was the slightest chance of the existence of deity, I would have more important tasks for which to entreat it. And judging from the number of gentlemen in bulky dark suits that continually surround her, the Queen and/or her custodians are not counting too heavily on such a method of security. — Larry Tickner, 589 Nora Place.

Capital punishment

As members of the Society of Friends, we are, and have traditionally been, equally concerned about those in trouble with the law and those who are the victims of crimes. We feel deeply troubled by attempts to bring back the death penalty.

We feel a responsibility to relate to that of God in everyone, and to note that two wrongs never make a right. A legal murder does not cancel an illegal murder and in no way does it compensate for the lost life. Violence begets violence and vengeance adds endlessly to the sufferings of innocent children, other members of the involved families, and of society. The executed offender has no opportunity for atonement through service to the bereaved family and to the community.

In Canada, as in Holland, Britain and other countries, murder rates decreased after the abolition of the death penalty. The lowest murder rates are found in those countries where the death penalty has been abolished for a long time. Nearly all western democracies have abolished capital punishment.

The highest number of police murders in Canada was in 1962, while the death penalty was still in effect. Police mortalities are 3.1 per 10,000 persons. They rank fifth under dangerous occupations, being considerably fewer than deaths suffered by miners, agricultural, construction and utility workers. It is just that all employers should be held responsible for unsafe working conditions. As taxpayers, we employ police to protect us. If we are to emphasize crime prevention rather than punishment, we would decrease the risks to police and to the public. The police could humanize their image and patrol on foot in friendly twosomes, unarmed as in Britain and elsewhere. And the public? If we disarm the police, they have every right to expect the public to do likewise. Civilian disarmament is the answer.

We need to ask why 23 million Canadians privately own approximately eight million guns — more than one per family. No wonder 87 per cent of murders involve husbands, wives and friends. These offenders are the safest parolees, the least likely to repeat an offence that brings such lasting remorse, grief and guilt. As most murders happen in emotional circumstances, fear of execution is not a deterrent, nor does the death penalty deter the remaining percentage of strangers who murder impersonally.

In all of Canadian history, only one released murderer has repeated his offence a second time. In the United States over a 40-year period, 12 per cent of 406 persons executed were later found to be innocent.

It is becoming increasingly clear that capital punishment cannot be discussed as an isolated issue, but must be seen within the context of our society, and the criminal justice system organized to deal with those who offend against t:

The facts about capital punishment need to be known before any vote is taken in Parliament. Write to Canadian Friends Service Committee, Toronto, Ont. or ask your local Council of Churches for an information kit. Send your MP a copy. Our hope is that we can and will help to dispel myths which encourage feelings of vengeance or apathy. Both are equally dangerous and criminally wasteful of lives, resources and our money. — Ben Gough-Azmier, Religious Society of Friends, 1831 Fern Street.

A cover-up by U.K. 'old-boy network'

By WILLIAM TUOHY
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — The sensational disclosures last week that a distinguished art historian and adviser to the royal family was a Soviet agent for nearly three decades has cast a harsh, unflattering light on the self-protective British political establishment.

The affair of Anthony Blunt, who was stripped of his knighthood, also focused attention on the power of the senior civil servants to make key decisions without notifying their political superiors.

The espisode suggests that the public is meant to be kept in the dark on matters concerning government policy to a degree that would be considered unacceptable in the United States.

In a statement in the Sunday Times this weekend, Blunt said his exposure was the result of a "complex political struggle" over proposed revisions of Britain's Official Secrets Act. British security chiefs had "dishonored" the bargain they made with him to keep his identity secret after he confessed in 1964 that he was a Soviet agent, Blunt said.

For the last few days, the British press has been highly critical of both the security services' role and of the decision to keep the scholar's espionage a secret and allow him to retain his appointment as official art adviser to Queen Elizabeth II.

The history of the espionage ring that penetrated the British intelligence and diplomatic establishment begins in the 1930s at Cambridge University, which then was the centre of British intellectual ferment.

In the mid-1930s, nazism was rampant in Germany, and fascism in Italy and Spain, and many of Britain's intellectuals saw communism, particularly the Soviet brand, as a counterweight to right-wing totalitarianism.

Blunt, a Marxist, was a stellar student at Cambridge, and after his undergraduate years he became a university don. He was tall and elegant, with a sarcastic wit and a snobbish manner.

Blunt was on intimate terms at Cambridge with Guy Burgess, a rakishly handsome man who was once described as the most brilliant student of his time — though Burgess affected a much more dissolute air than one expected of a scholar.

BURGESS . . . rakish

Other members of this group at Cambridge included Kim Philby, son of a famous Arabist; and Donald Maclean, whose father was a member of Parliament.

During that period, Soviet intelligence agents sought out Blunt. The Russians were interested in such upper-middle-class and upper-class targets because they were part of an establishment to which members of the British Communist Party were rarely admitted.

Blunt became a recruiter at Cambridge for Soviet intelligence and he may have been responsible for bringing Philby, Burgess and Maclean into the Soviet espionage net.

By the eve of the Second World War, the articulate, engaging Philby had a job with the Times of London as a war correspondent, having served in Spain, while the dour Maclean and the profligate Burgess were brought into the Foreign Office as junior diplomats.

Blunt had joined the army and was assigned to military intelligence because of his fluent French, acquired in Paris, where his father had been chaplain to the British Embassy. At some point, Blunt shifted into the British counterintelligence service.

Similarly, Philby was recruited into the British Intelligence Service, which had responsibility for intelligence matters outside the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth.

While Maclean seemed a hard-working diplomat, he also showed signs of emotional instability. Burgess was given to drunken bouts and homosexual escapades, which came to the notice of the police.

But despite their backgrounds, all four men rose in the intelligence and diplomatic corps during the war while passing secrets to their Russian controllers.

In defence of his treason, Philby later declared that the Soviet Union had kept the world "from being ruled by Hitler and Hirohito." But many other Cambridge students, Marxists or otherwise, believed that Stalin's pact with Hitler had in fact encouraged war, and that it was really Britain that had resisted Hitler.

The screening of candidates for Britain's most sensitive security organizations remained remarkably lax, and many observers today attribute that to the existence of the "old boy network."

This refers to the fact that graduates of posh secondary schools and the best universities stuck together, not only helping each other get influential jobs but also ignoring charges of disloyalty against their colleagues.

"It was assumed that anyone who was a gentleman could simply not be guilty of treason," one observer said recently. "It was simply not conceivable."

Thus, specialists in intelligence matters now suggest that Philby, Burgess, Maclean and Blunt were not the only upper-class Englishmen in key jobs who sold out to the Russians. George Young, a former senior officer in the British Intelligence Service, said a few days ago that there were up to a dozen in the Cambridge spy ring. Some suspects, he said, were asked to leave the government service if there was not enough evidence to actually indict them.

Young said that the British establishment was a No. 1 target of Soviet espionage because, "If you can get men into the top level of the British establishment, you then have a source of high-grade intelligence."

During the war and in the years immediately after, all four men were in position to relay priceless secrets to the Soviets. Blunt, in the counter-intelligence service, knew what measures were being taken against Soviet agents in the United Kingdom. Burgess and Maclean were familiar with top-level diplomatic exchanges, and Maclean, when later assigned to Washington, had access to atomic development secrets.

Philby, who rose to become head of the Soviet section in the British Intelligence Service, and was later assigned to act as liaison with the fledgling CIA in Washington, had specific knowledge of Allied agent networks in Eastern Europe and elsewhere.

Burgess and Maclean continued to act erratically at their diplomatic posts, continually getting into scrapes that were brought to the attention of embassy security officials. Yet they remained in their sensitive positions — even after they came under suspicion by security authorities.

In explanation, Hugh Trevor-Roper, the distinguished British historian and who himself was in intelligence during the Second World War, said recently, "The Foreign Office was incredibly tolerant of Maclean, after his various excesses, which were no doubt caused by the tensions of his double life. The extraordinary survival of Burgess (whom the office generally detested) can only partly be explained by the personal patronage of the minister, Hector McNeil.

"Here, I believe the social factors did operate with lamentable effect."

By 1950, the counter-intelligence service realized that there were "moles" within the British diplomatic service and the intelligence service.

As early as 1945, Igor Gouzenko, a Soviet defector in Canada, had alerted the British authorities to the existence of spies within their establishment. He said he warned authorities that a Soviet agent was working in British counterintelligence.

American intelligence, too, learned that secrets were coming out of the British Embassy in Washington and being passed on to the Soviets.

At various times, Philby, Burgess, and Maclean came under suspicion. But again the old-boy network served to protect its own against the inquiring intelligence agents and proof was never marshalled against the traitors.

However, in 1951, the security men decided to interrogate Maclean in depth. Blunt, with his inside contacts, apparently learned of the planned interrogation and alerted Burgess, who in turn drove to Maclean's house in the country.

Both spies then — on a Friday night, when official Britain is shut down for the weekend — took a cross-channel steamer to France, and subsequently turned up in Moscow.

Though the British security officials suspected that the pair had been warned, they still were not able to pin down the source. Philby among others was suspected, but proof apparently was lacking.

Blunt, meanwhile, had returned after the war to his profession as art historian and was appointed surveyor of the King's pictures. On George VI's death, he was given the same role for Queen Elizabeth's art collection.

On the surface, Blunt seemed to have severed his connection with British intelligence although he certainly had many contacts remaining in the security service. However, he continued to function as a Soviet agent.

Even if Blunt had a change of heart, the Soviet KGB would have found it easy to blackmail him to remain on their payroll. For Blunt, according to friends, would not have been able at that time to accept the disgrace of being a known Soviet agent.

In 1956, the Queen personally made Blunt a knight commander of the Royal Victorian Order for his services in setting up the royal art collection.

Over the years, Blunt's prestige soared in art scholarship circles. He ws a professor at Cambridge, he received honorary degrees and published articles and books on painting.

After the Burgess-Maclean scandal, the CIA increasingly developed information of the existence of the Soviet "moles" inside the British establishment.

According to a new book, The Climate of Treason by Andrew Boyle, the United States uncovered a British scientist, code-named "Basil," who had been working in the United States and passing atomic secrets to the Russians. U.S. officials managed to "turn around" this spy, and fed him information to pass on to the Soviets — information damaging to their intelligence activities.

The U.S. counter-intelligence chief, James Angleton, reportedly developed information from Basil and other sources about the names of English spies still working for the Foreign Office and the intelligence service. But Angleton decided not to notify the British because their adverse reaction might alert the Russians that "Basil" had been turned.

The British intelligence chief had never quite forgiven the Americans for not giving them a complete account of what they had learned at that time. And the Americans equally have mistrusted British intelligence because they believe that it is too prone to be penetrated by Soviet agents.

In 1963, additional evidence surfaced that conclusively tied Philby with espionage. Presumably alerted by someone in London, Philby secretly fled to Moscow. Philby was recently promoted from the rank of Soviet colonel to brigadier-general, according to British press reports from Moscow.

In 1964, the net began closing in on Blunt, who had been interrogated 11 times over the years in the security force's effort to root out the moles. This time, Blunt confessed — in return for immunity from prosecution.

It is that immunity that has raised questions this last week, because many lesser spies — code clerks, servicemen, minor diplomats — who admitted spying for the Russians were given long prison sentences in Britain.

Was there one system of justice for establishment figures and some Labor members of Parliament and another system for ordinary Britons? In a report to the House of Commons last week, Mrs. Thatcher said Blunt was granted immunity because "it was considered important to gain his cooperation in the continuing investigations by the security authorities, following the defection of Burgess, Maclean and Philby."

Blunt was also not required to resign his position in the royal household, Mrs. Thatcher said, "because the security authorities thought it desirable not to put at risk his cooperation in their continuing investigations." She said there was also no conclusive evidence, except for his confession, on which to indict Blunt for espionage.

But other sources indicated that if Blunt had been publicly tried in a court of law in 1964, he might name other moles who would further embarrass the government. The Conservative government of Sir Alec Douglas-Home was only then recovering from the Profumo scandal of the year before.

This involved the liaison of Defence Minister John Profumo with prostitute Christine Keeler, who was also having sexual relations with a Soviet Embassy official in London.

One question is whether Blunt was given immunity because of information he could provide about the Soviets, or whether it was simply to keep the government free of another political scandal.

What also angered many members of Parliament about the Blunt affair was that prime minister Douglas-Home, now Lord Home, and his foreign secretary and the Home Secretary were not informed of the situation, they all say. Thus the decision for immunity and for secrecy was apparently made by senior civil servants instead of their political superiors.

The senior civil servants, known as "mandarins", have long controlled most of the departments of government along "White Hall," the heart of the British administration in central London. Many of them take the tacit view that it is they who really run the government.

THE TIMES OF LONDON
An Editorial

Anthony Blunt is a more substantial figure than the other Cambridge traitors. Maclean and Philby are able men but no more than that, while Burgess was at best a talented phoney. Professor Blunt is one of the most distinguished art historians of his time, a man who has made a major contribution both to his subject and to its academic development. Many people who only knew him as an art historian must be astonished and distressed that a man of such gifts could have been guilty of such conduct.

The matter seems to have been mishandled by the authorities at almost every stage. When Blunt was admitted to the Security Service in 1940, he was well known to be both a Marxist and a homosexual, both of which characteristics are normally regarded as grounds of unsuitability for such work. It was not even the time of Russian popularity during the war. On the contrary, he was admitted during the period of the Nazi-Soviet Pact. Unfortunately, it is already well established that the Security Service in 1940 was very lax in the admission of unsuitable entrants. That is now history.

From 1951 onwards, Blunt was under suspicion of having been a Russian agent. The Security Services were sufficiently suspicious to interrogate him on no fewer than 11 occasions. On each occasion he asserted his innocence. During that time, despite the notoriety of the defection of Burgess and Maclean, they did not think it necessary to warn the Palace. That can only be regarded as a very serious misjudgment. Suspicions were substantial, they were not without evidence, and they proved to be correct.

After the further defection of Philby in January, 1963, Blunt still remained under suspicion, but with no sufficient evidence against him. Early in 1964 new information directly implicated him. He was then offered immunity from prosecution in return for co-operation with the Security Services, which he accepted. He made his first confession and thereafter worked with the British Security Services apparently to the disadvantage of his previous masters. It is not clear what precise form the immunity bargain took. Did the Security Services offer him tenure of his post as Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures, in order to keep him happy?

Only after his confession was the Queen's Private Secretary informed of the situation. For whatever reason it was decided that he should not be required to resign his appointment in the royal household, which he had held for 19 years, and was to hold for another eight.

That was an extraordinary decision. It ought to be a cardinal principle to protect the Queen. In some ways perhaps the matter is not quite as bad as it looks. After his confession, Blunt was phased out from Palace activities. He had no access to papers of any significance and he was seldom if at all seen at the Palace. It cannot be supposed that the Queen wished to see him. Nevertheless he retained at least a titular office, and retained a residual advisory post down to last week.

In such matters the Queen acts under advice. The responsibility for that advice is that of the government, not of the Queen's Private Secretary, let alone of the Queen herself. The government of the day, though Lord Home the prime minister appears to have had no knowledge of the transaction and subsequent governments must have decided that the supposed advantages to the Security Service justified leaving a traitor on the Queen's staff. That was a wrong decision, putting secondary matters first. It must be supposed that the governments were concerned to avoid embarrassment. In the end, embarrassment has come. It is a bit late to strip a man of his honors when he has been knowingly permitted to hold royal posts as a retired traitor for 15 years.

Spectacular gains boost industrial profits

OTTAWA (CP) — Spectacular gains in resource, textile, clothing and electrical product sectors highlight an increase of 40.1 per cent in after tax profits for industrial corporations in the three months ended Sept. 30, compared to a year ago, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday in preliminary results.

The increase, excluding unusual gains or losses, is slightly above growth of 39 per cent in the second quarter and below the peak of 52.9 per cent in the first three months of the year. A levelling-off in the profit performance suggests a possible down-turn by the end of 1978, says the statistics agency.

The mining sector, aided by a lower Canadian dollar in export markets, showed after-tax profit growth of 55 per cent, before extraordinary items, on a growth in sales of 25 per cent.

Manufacturing industries followed with after-tax profit increases of 48.3 per cent in 16.9 per cent higher sales. Other industries recorded a gain of 24.1 per cent over the third quarter of 1978 on sales growth of 14.8 per cent.

Within the mining sector, after-tax profits for the metal mining industry jumped 185.3 per cent on higher sales of 47.8 per cent in the third quarter compared to a year previous, a result of increased operating margins, the agency noted.

Elsewhere in the resource sector, paper and wood producers increased their after-tax profits by 65.5 per cent in the third quarter with an 86.5-per-cent jump for the petroleum and and coal sectors thanks in part to the competitive edge of a lower Canadian dollar. Chemicals and chemical product industries boosted their after-tax profits by 117.9 per cent compared to a year ago.

However, the agency notes that the sharp profit gains experienced in the resource sector could be slowing down because of higher interest rates in the U.S., the most import export market for the sector.

In manufacturing, textile and knitting mills increased their after-tax profits by 108.1 per cent in the third quarter on higher sales of 18.1 per cent. In recovering from previous year losses, the industry has been helped by the federal government's imposition of stiffer quotas on overseas imports.

Electrical products manufacturers also showed much higher profits, 121.2 per cent in the third quarter compared to a year ago on the strength of increased sales of 22.7 per cent.

Food processors showed modest profit gains of 9.8 per cent on higher sales of 12.5 per cent in the third quarter while food wholesalers increased their after-tax profits by 19.6 per cent on bigger sales of 18.8 per cent.

However, retail department stores showed a 10.5-per-cent drop in third-quarter profits to $34 million even though sales grew by 11.6 per cent.

Another poor performer was the gas distribution industry which recorded an after-tax loss of $10 million compared to a loss of $4 million in the third quarter of 1978, equivalent to a 200-per-cent decline.

But Statistics Canada says the drop is a result of seasonal factors before increased consumer energy demands of winter months.

The after-tax profit data does not include construction, real estate, agriculture, fishing, hunting, banking and government-owned enterprises.

Air firm too rich to sell?

TORONTO (CP) — De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. had a lean and hungry look when the federal government took it under its wing five years ago.

But it's plump now, ready for market, and not everyone is happy to see it go.

The aircraft manufacturer, along with seven other Crown corporations, was placed on the auction block recently by the federal Progressive Conservative government as part of its election promise to move out of the private sector.

De Havilland, purchased by the Liberal government in 1974 for $40.5 million, has been a pioneer in the development and marketing of short-takeoff-and-landing aircraft, among them the Dash-7 medium-range passenger plane.

It was a plan by de Havilland's parent company, British-based Hawker-Siddeley, to kill the Dash-7 project which prompted the government to adopt the Toronto company in 1974.

But since then, de Havilland, which has sold 700 smaller Twin Otter STOL aircraft around the world, has delivered 10 Dash-7s, has orders for 22 and options to purchase on another 25.

It's also developing another commuter plane — the DHC-8 — similar to the Dash-7, but seating only 32 passengers compared with its sister craft's 50 seats.

Getting the Dash-7 off the ground cost Canadian taxpayers more than $100 million in development loans, but the government's decision proved sound.

While precise projections of de Havilland's expected profits are not yet known, company president John Sanderson said the Dash-7 will transform the company's financial position by the mid-1980s and will record sales of more than $2.5 billion — in 1978 dollars — before its production run ends sometime in the 1990s.

It is those projected sales figures that have attracted prospective buyers.

Hugh Mullington, a federal government spokesman, said in an interview de Havilland's future profits and the public's past investment will be major factors in setting the price.

"When you sell a corporation, the price you get should reflect your investment and its future profits," Mullington said. "The government is not going to give de Havilland away."

But some de Havilland executives and employees have questioned whether a potential buyer would offer enough to offset the advantages of leaving the company in public hands.

Another fear expressed at de Havilland is that a private buyer might jeopardize the company's long-term future by skimming off profits generated by the Dash-7 program.

Company spokesman Ernest Ball said he does not believe that fear is well-founded but conceded it is upsetting some of the plant's 4,700 workers.

"Management is confident the government will insist any purchaser continues the company's long-term activities," Ball said. "But the work force is a bit twitchy about what will happen in the future."

Mullington agreed that the government should consider the long-term view.

"It would not be in the government's best interests to sell the company to anyone who would wrap it up," Mullington said.

Noranda deal brings $226M

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. has raised $266 million in a private sale of 14 million shares at $19 a share to use for investment, particularly in gas exploration in western Canada.

Noranda's announcement comes on the heels of a meeting of Noranda directors where Brascan Ltd., the multinational controlled by the Bronfmans of Toronto and Montreal, sought to get two of their executives on the Noranda board.

Brascan came under the control of Edper Equities Ltd., owned by the Bronfman family, last spring in a takeover battle. Recently, Brascan acquired 16.3 per cent of Noranda, giving it the biggest single block of shares.

Customs speedier

OTTAWA (CP) — The customs and excise department will attempt to speed delivery of goods imported via international courier services by exempting duty-free items from its formal handling procedure.

In a news release, the department said items vith a value less than $500 will be separated from those requiring duty. The new system had been tested and should reduce paperwork and accelerate delivery.

Anti-U.S. violence spreads

Unidentified Moslem gunmen attacked the Grand Mosque in Mecca, Islam's holiest shrine, took hundreds of hostages and barricaded themselves in one of the seven minarets.

A Kuwait news agency report said "many people" were killed, including the imam (priest) in charge of the mosque.

Saudi tanks ringed the shrine and helicopters hovered over the area.

There was no word on the gunmen's demands beyond a Saudi report they wanted one of their number "recognized as the promised Messiah."

The gunmen were still entrenched inside the building, Saudi Arabian Interior Minister Prince Nayef ibn Abdulaziz said today.

The prince said Saudi forces did not storm the places where the "renegades from the Islamic faith barricaded themselves inside the house of God" to avoid harming the Moslems held hostage.

There were no details and no word on the hostages or death toll.

Unconfirmed reports said the gunmen were Iranian Shiite Moslems, but in Tehran, Khomeini said the attack was "the work of criminal American imperialism" and hinted "Zionist agents" were involved.

One report said the Pakistan violence started after a broadcast report that 300 Pakistanis were hostage in the Mecca mosque. The State Department said the report was "ambiguous" and suggested non-Moslem involvement in the incident.

Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq earlier today prayed before a crowd in Rawalpindi that "Allah may bring success to the Moslems of the world."

Khomeini whipped up mammoth anti-U.S. demonstrations across Iran today as part of his campaign to press the U.S. government into surrendering the deposed shah.

Hundreds of thousands chanted "Mar bar shah, mar bar Carter" ("Death to the shah, death to Carter") as they marched in well-organized columns through the streets of Iran's capital.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Iran-Pakistan-Saudi Arabia events looked, at least, like "an extraordinary set of coincidences."

Carter referred to Khomeini's charges of American involvement in the Mecca incident and said, "I would suggest that this is indicative of the mischief-making in the region." He branded Khomeini's charges as "totally false, demagogic, a lie."

The threat of U.S. military action came from the White House. Press secretary Jody Powell said the United States is seeking a peaceful solution through "every available channel" but has "other remedies available." He said that "such remedies are explicitly recognized in the charter of the United Nations," which sanctions military as well as economic and diplomatic action by an aggrieved state.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met in Washington for nearly an hour with about a dozen ambassadors from Moslem countries and afterwards Pakistan ambassador Sultan Muhammad Khan said, "The situation in Pakistan is fully under control. We deeply regret the incident."

Sen. Henry Jackson, (Dem—Wash.) met separately with Vance and said, "They (Iranians) have to know there could be severe retaliatory measures if they slaughter Americans."

Thirteen hostages freed from the embassy were at an air force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, undergoing medical examinations and resting up from their ordeal.

In Ottawa, Iranian Charge d'Affaires Mohammed Hussein Abdeli said Canadians in Iran are in no danger despite reports Iranian students could seize them.

"As I have several times reassured the Canadian people and the Canadian government," Abdeli said, "the Canadian citizens in Iran are not in danger and they are completely safe."

Thank You

"I would like to thank those many people who worked so hard for me, and those who voted for me on Saturday. I pledge to work for all citizens, and all neighborhoods, as Mayor.

Fed exhorted to doff gloves

Colin Snell, of the Greater Vancouver local of the Carpenters' Union, said there have been steady attacks on the unemployment benefit program since 1970.

He said in that year, it only took eight weeks of work to qualify for jobless benefits. Now it takes anywhere from 14 to 20 weeks.

It is now at the point where, with the recent UI restrictions, that 250,000 unemployed are being denied benefits, Snell said.

He said those people are having to resort to welfare in order "to put bread on the table."

Snell said labor's wrath should not be directed only at the federal government. B.C.'s Socred administration deserves some criticism as well.

"All they (B.C.) are doing is running to Ottawa saying that it is going to cost $5 million more in welfare benefits.

"It is time to go on the offensive," Snell said.

"We are in a position where we should be saying, no more cutbacks. Cutbacks should be rolled back and benefits increased."

Snell said until the labor movement mobilizes and puts the heat on governments, the country's major corporations will continue to press for unemployment insurance cutbacks.

Most of the delegates who addressed the convention supported the federation's efforts over the past year in dealing with the unemployment problem.

However, Dick Belfit, of Victoria, a member of the Telecommunications Workers Union, said there were too many inefficiencies.

"Far too many things haven't been carried out," he told delegates.

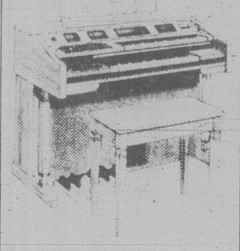

He said the federation had asked affiliated unions to kick in $520,000 in support of the fight against unemployment and only $140,000 was raised. "It's not good enough," Belfit said.

Al Carle, of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said B.C. will have a very serious unemployment problem in six months.

He said the labor movement should be working now to marshall public support for changes in the jobless situation.

"The unemployed now are hidden in a brown government envelope. It is our job to bring them out of that envelope and into the public eye," Carle said.

Bank of B.C. revenue up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bank of British Columbia has reported a 27 per cent increase in revenue for the fiscal year 1979 to $6.67 million from $5.26 million in 1978.

Per share earnings increased to $4.41 from $4.08 in the previous year.

The bank's effective tax rate for the year was 23 per cent reflecting the after tax effect of the bank's increased investment in income debentures and term prefered securities, Trevor Pilley, chairman and chief executive officer, said in a news release.

The bank also saw expansion of its asset growth by 31.4 per cent to $1.99 billion from $1.52 billion. Deposit and loan growth also increased by 31.4 and 28.1 per cent respectively.

In addition, the bank took a further step into the international market with the opening in September of a Hong Kong subsidiary, B.C. Financial Corp. Ltd.

Domestically, branches were opened in New Westminster and Burnaby, B.C. The bank plans to continue its expansion policy by opening four or five new branches in 1980.

Values falling over uranium

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the royal commission on uranium mining in British Columbia were urged Tuesday to move quickly in making a decision about public disclosure of the locations of uranium concentrations in the Okanagan.

Jay Lewis, of the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition, said real estate values are dropping in the area and people are concerned about the effect of the concentrations on fruit and cattle.

Lewis said that more new claims have been registered in the area in recent weeks and the commission owes it to the public to make a quick decision on public disclosure.

Commission chairman Dr. David Bates said the commission is reviewing the matter daily and hopes that a decision can be made by the end of the week.

In other business before the commission, Dr. A. M. Robertson, appearing for the Mining Association of B.C., said the design of uranium mill tailings impoundments is passing through a technical revolution.

Design to accommodate recently-identified environmental and health concerns has developed largely during the last three years and is still evolving, he said.

Asked what had triggered a change in attitude by mining companies towards environmental concerns, Robertson said it was because the companies were suddenly able to measure radio-activity and other contaminants, something that couldn't be done five or 10 years ago.

Robertson agreed that other factors such as environmental concerns, more strict regulations and growth in the amount of tailings also played a part in the changed attitude.

He said waste impoundment areas are being designed so that they should not require intervention for hundreds or thousands of years, although this could not be guaranteed.

Fish conservation measures needed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Pacific fishery advisory committee is currently meeting in Vancouver to try to resolve a dispute over restrictions on gill-net fishermen, Fisheries Minister Jim McGrath said Tuesday.

At a meeting of the Commons fisheries committee, McGrath told Ted Miller, New Democratic Party fisheries spokesman, that while fishermen are upset about the restriction of one net per gill boat involved in the herring roe fishery, "conservation measures are needed to protect the stocks."

The industry knew the one-net restriction was planned for the roe fishery next spring. In the past, gill netters were allowed two nets per boat. Critics say reducing the nets will result in the layoff of up to 1,500 fishermen.

Seine fishermen are being restricted to either northern or southern zones for the fishery, a federal conservation measure which they are fighting in the Federal Court of Canada. A seine net is dragged behind a vessel; a gill net is set in the water and the fish get caught in it by their gills.

McGrath told Don Munro (PC-Esquimalt-Saanich) that "it would be irresponsible not to conserve this fishery" which was almost wiped out once by overfishing.

The department hopes it can maintain the fishery at about 40,000 metric tonnes of roe with the seiners allocated 55 per cent of the catch and the gill-netters the rest.

The fishery touches off a gold-rush scramble every spring as buyers are usually willing to pay high prices for the roe which is popular in Japan. In some places fishing lasts only a matter of moments or hours as the roe-ladden herring assemble. Officials decide on the spot how much fish can be taken.

A "nugget" of information:

Majority control of B.C. mining is in Canadian hands.

Foreign investment is important to B.C.'s mining industry, helping to develop new mines and create more jobs for British Columbians. But the dominant factor is still Canadian...with 55% of the control of B.C. mining operations in Canadian hands.* Mining development in B.C. is proceeding at a strong, steady rate...and it's happening in a way that benefits our province and our country.

Binch, often critical of the people in the Trudeau cabinet.

He made only one public appearance in the May 22 election, campaigning for a Liberal candidate in Toronto.

Trudeau's sudden announcement follows several months of quiet grumbling about his leadership, especially from the depleted Liberal ranks in Western Canada.

Complaints grew stronger because of what many perceived to be Trudeau's indifference to his new role as Opposition leader. He was absent from Parliament frequently, and when present for the daily question period, often kept a low profile.

Previously, Trudeau has said he would step down only when a leadership contender surfaced who held the same views on national unity as himself.

Trudeau publicly made his announcement to reporters by rapidly and unemotionally reading a brief statement, first in French and then in English.

After thanking Liberals, Quebecers and Canadians for the support shown him in the 14 years he has been in federal politics, Trudeau also said goodbye to the reporters he had so often snubbed.

"I'm bloody sorry I won't have you to kick around any more," he said jokingly. The reporters applauded.

Senator Graham, one of Trudeau's chief advisers, said Trudeau had agonized alone about his decision to leave. Trudeau only hinted at how difficult the decision was for him.

"There's no easy way or ideal time to leave and there are always strong public and private reasons both for going and for staying on," said the former prime minister. "At a point in time one simply makes the decision as to what is best."

Allan MacEachen, deputy prime minister in Trudeau's last government, said Trudeau told him before the morning caucus meeting that he was quitting.

"Even though I knew it was coming, we were all flabbergasted," the Nova Scotia MP said. "You didn't know how to react."

Senator Sidney Buckwold from Saskatchewan said MPs and senators applauded Trudeau after his announcement and then, "there was a lot of tears."

MacEachen described the atmosphere as "a very moving experience."

Trudeau wept as he made the announcement to MPs and senators. He was more contained when he met reporters.

His announcement gives a green light to fellow Liberals who have been waiting in the wings, possibly for years, to obtain his job.

Among the names most frequently mentioned on Parliament Hill are John Turner, a former finance minister, and such MPs as Lloyd Axworthy from Winnipeg, Arthur Phillips from Vancouver, Francis Fox from Montreal and Herb Gray from Windsor, Ont.

Unlike Trudeau's predecessors, Lester Pearson and Louis St. Laurent, no successor was being groomed.

Traditionally, the Liberal party alternates between French- and English-Canadian leaders. The possibility of an English-Canadian leader succeeding Trudeau is further heightened by the fact that Liberals need someone to win back their diminished support outside of Quebec.

CARNATION IN his mouth, Trudeau awaits results of Liberal leadership conference he won in April, 1968; below, as a stylish bachelor, he heads to field to present 1970 Grey Cup trophy in Toronto.

The ensuing Liberal leadership contest will likely prevent an early defeat of the minority Conservative government. The Liberals will not want to force an election while there is no one at the helm of the party.

The Conservatives' defeat in two byelections Monday weakened their ability to win the confidence of Parliament and started speculation an election could be called soon.

Attention now will be focussed in the spring, when Liberals will likely be eager to go into an election with a new leader.

Prime Minister Clark told reporters he will not try to take advantage of Trudeau's resignation by calling an election.

Clark said his intention is "to govern as long as possible" after a new Liberal leader is selected.

The prime minister praised Trudeau for leading Canada "in a singular and dramatic way" and for introducing such profound reforms as the Official Languages Act.

Jeanne Sauve, communications minister in Trudeau's last government, said her retiring leader had made an immense and important contribution to Canada.

"He put in front of the Canadian people the true nature of the country."

Trudeau tried to show Canadians that the country "is two people wanting to speak two different languages and also wanting to live together."

Because of Trudeau's desire for privacy, it was not known how much difficulties in his family life prompted him to quit.

Rumors of a retirement from politics began surfacing when his wife, Margaret, left him in 1977. Trudeau kept custody of their three young sons, gaining the reputation of a devoted father.

Trudeau has often hinted that when he leaves politics, he will move to the country. He owns a chalet in the Laurentian Mountains north of his native Montreal.

Ontario Premier William Davis said the resignation today of former prime minister Pierre Trudeau will end an era that brought a time of great excitement and change in this country.

Davis said he wished Trudeau well.

"While we were always in different partisan camps, one could not but respect his commitment to his view of Canada and the ideals he held and the tenacity with which he defended them."

Ontario NDP Leader Mike Cassidy said Trudeau has "a rich and complicated personality and the judgment on his record will be the same."

An emotionally upset Donald Macdonald, former Liberal finance minister, said the resignation of Trudeau saddened him.

"I am a great admirer of Pierre's and I feel very badly," he told reporters.

"I don't think he was fully appreciated but I respect the personal decision he's made.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said history will judge Trudeau's leadership.

"History becomes the best judge," said Barrett. "I'm sure he did everything he wanted to do.

"He never did complete his one major mission - that was a new constitution for Canada.

"But he was, and is, a major factor in the Canadian political scene and his record still has to be evaluated by history. But he was a powerful force in the Canadian political scene, there is no question of that, and he did a lot of things during his 10 years."

Ron Basford, former justice minister in the Trudeau cabinet, said the resignation caught him by surprise.

"It certainly doesn't follow the conventional wisdom that he would stay on until after the Quebec referendum," said Basford. "I'm saddened by his decision.

"We've lost one of the most brilliant political minds in Canada."

The 15-year Vancouver-Centre MP who resigned in August, 1978, to return to private business said it will take some time for history to record Trudeau's impact on the Canadian scene.

Environment Minister Rafe Mair, chairman of the B.C. cabinet committee on confederation, said it will be fascinating to see whether a change in the Liberal leadership will mean a change in the party's centralist approach to the constitutional question.

servers with his willingness and ability to change styles. Often appearing aloof and arrogant, he proved even in his last election that he could turn on the charisma at will.

His personal motto was "reason before passion" but he was famous for his ill-tempered outbursts, mouthing the legendary "fuddle-duddle" phrase across the floor of the Commons and later threatening to kick the ass of a Conservative MP who heckled him.

Never known for his respect or affection for journalists, Trudeau once got into a shoving match with a radio reporter.

At the beginning of the last election campaign, he seemed almost intent on alienating voters. He called farmers professional complainers, told a heckler to get off his ass and find a job and labelled the provinces selfish and egotistical.

But, aides said, galvanized by the realization that Clark had a good chance of taking away his job, Trudeau finished strongly with blazing attacks on his Conservative rival.

Ironically, public opinion polls showed voters overwhelmingly considered Trudeau the most competent and most attractive of the three party leaders.

The battle he could not win was against the apparent widespread feeling that after 16 years of Liberal government and 11 years of Trudeau, it was time for a change.

Highlights of the Trudeau years

OTTAWA (CP) — Following is a list of the highlights of former prime minister Pierre Trudeau's political career:

— April, 1968: Trudeau becomes Liberal leader and days later succeeds Lester Pearson as prime minister of Canada.

— June 25, 1968: with "trudeaumania" seizing the country, he sweeps to his first election victory as Liberal leader, winning 155 parliamentary seats to 72 for the Conservatives, 22 for the New Democratic Party and 14 for the Creditistes.

— October, 1970: Trudeau and his cabinet invoke War Measures Act to deal with Front de Liberation du Quebec crisis. FLQ kills kidnapped Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte and British diplomat James Cross is released by FLQ captors.

— March, 1971: Trudeau, Canada's most eligible bachelor, marries 23-year-old Margaret Sinclair in quiet North Vancouver ceremony, surprising the nation.

— October 31, 1972: Trudeau's Liberals hang on to power with 109 seats, narrowly edging Robert Stanfield's Conservatives who win 107 seats in federal election.

— May, 1974: Opposition defeats minority Liberal government forcing election.

— July 8, 1974: Trudeau thumps Stanfield Conservatives, regaining a parliamentary majority with 141 of the 264 seats.

— May 27, 1977: Trudeau and his wife agree to separate. Their three children remain with the prime minister.

— May 22, 1979: The Liberal government loses election to Joe Clark's Conservatives, winning only 114 seats to the Conservatives' 136. Trudeau steps down as prime minister in June.

— Nov. 21, 1979: Trudeau quits as Liberal leader and calls for a leadership convention next March.

ART SHOW AND SALE

Works by inmates of the William Head Institution

Throughout history, many great works have been created behind bars. November 22 through 24 in the Douglas Room of the Bay Victoria, we invite you to view unique works of art from a contemporary institution.

You'll see oil paintings, stained glass, soapstone sculptures, pottery and leatherwork, all done by the inmates of William Head. Of special interest is the copperwork by award-winning artist Michael McCormick.

Proceeds from the sale of these works will help the inmates continue learning their crafts. Many of them hope to re-establish themselves through their work. This show is sponsored by the Council of Churches and the John Howard Society.

because the Tories in Ottawa won't appoint an old Liberal to the Supreme Court bench.

If he gets his way, Education Minister Pat McGeer will drop the kindergarten-to-Grade-12 portion of his portfolio and become minister of Universities, Science and Technology — that's the "government restructuring" Bennett has been talking about.

This would leave vacancies in education, human resources (if McCarthy gets tourism), agriculture and deregulation.

Some believe deregulation will never have another full-time master but will be left in Finance Minister Evan Wolfe's bailiwick until it deregulates itself at the end of 1980.

However, Bennett may well decide to use this most-junior portfolio to introduce one more new face to the cabinet circle.

A year in deregulation would make an excellent apprenticeship for a real cabinet job.

Presuming four vacancies, and presuming all others of the old guard stay where they are, who will be the newly annointed?

In order of likelihood they are Bill Ritchie, of Central Fraser Valley, Jack Heinrich, of Prince George North, Angus Ree, of North Vancouver-Capilano and Brian Smith of Oak Bay, all of them first-term MLAs.

Ritchie, despite a lame-duck RCMP investigation into bribery allegations that have already been repudiated, is admired by Bennett who has always had a soft spot for self-made millionaires. Ree is an articulate and well-connected lawyer.

Keeping geographic considerations in mind, Heinrich is the best the central interior has to offer and Smith the only thing Vancouver Island provides for new cabinet material.

Peter Hyndman, another freshman member and highly touted as cabinet calibre, is reported to have slipped in Bennett's estimation and likely will not be named this time around.

This may be the result of what one source describes as Hyndman's tendency "to go around giving everyone advice they don't want."

The hopefuls among the old guard will be disappointed again.

Pat Jordan of North Okanagan, Jack Kempf of Omenica and Walter Davidson of Delta will have to resign themselves to singing in the chorus.

However the greatest disappointment Friday will be suffered by former transportation minister Jack Davis.

Davis' resignation and subsequent conviction on a charge of theft did not stop him being re-elected in May, but there is no way Bennett is considering him for a new portfolio.

Hope, which springs eternal in the human breast, must really overflow within the buttoned-down bosoms of back-benchers.

Flamboyant poet Dennis Lee autographs books for Joshua and Sam Page

They all came for Alligator Pie

Two years ago Dennis Lee had an audience of 10 at a poetry recital here.

This week when he appeared a second time in Victoria, 85 showed up.

Next time? Who knows? The word is spreading.

Lee, dressed in a colorful caftan, acted out his poems with flamboyant gestures for a roomful of entranced pre-schoolers sitting cross-legged on the floor of the Public Library youth section.

He invited listeners to join in with doggerel of their own. They loved it.

The Toronto-born author writes children's books crammed full of delightful monsters and nonsense verse.

He's come a long way in a couple of years, said Margaret Toakley, youth department head.

"We didn't even advertise who Dennis Lee was," she said Tuesday after the author had left for Vancouver. "We just told the kids to come on in for some more Alligator Pie."

That's the title of his first really successful book, published by Macmillan in 1977. He received national coverage in Weekend Magazine soon after.

Lee was born in Toronto in 1939 and graduated from the University of Toronto with an MA in English. He lectured for a while and is co-founder of the small publishing firm House of Anansi which specializes in scholarly works.

A writer-in-residence at the University of Toronto last year, Lee is now unemployed . . . so to speak.

This week, funded by the Canada Council, he is touring B.C. coastal libraries with his four books as part of national Childrens Book Week.

The latest Lee offering is called The Ordinary Bath, a new book of short stories for pre-schoolers. It's all about a little boy who takes what starts out to be a normal bath but finds the tub full of strange monsters.

Few in the so-called Western World would say the U.S. deserves what is now happening to it in Iran. That Americans abroad, generally, have been "asking for it" for years, though, is an entirely different thing.

Loud, abrasive, Bermuda shorts-clad Americans who fail to blend harmoniously with the environment don't only come in the tourist variety. They abound in many countries where, as well as those in diplomatic missions, they are employed as advisers to governments or private companies and never miss a chance to expound the "America-is-the-greatest" theory.

They've been doing this in Iran for years — ramming it down the locals' throats. Highly-paid American technical advisers to the oil and textile industries (as well as several others) have moaned continuously that they were frustrated because Iranians weren't interested in learning from them. But how can you really teach someone or share something when you're so busy being superior to them every waking minute?

Young Iranians studying in America say it is this feeling of American superiority, in fact, that more than anything they want to get back at.

There are those in Washington saying the Shah should never have been allowed into the U.S. and they are desperately looking for some knuckles to rap. But he is really only a way of hitting at all Americans. Eventually, this would have happened, anyway . . . somewhere.

During more than two years in Tehran, where I worked for the English-language paper Kayhan International, I met and made friends with many Americans. Yet I met only one who was anything like being integrated, as it were, and he was a feature writer married to an Iranian woman and had lived there years.

While we on Kayhan (New Zealanders, Englishmen and Australians mostly) were paid Iranian salaries and thus had to live virtually as the Iranians lived, the so-called American advisers had half their salaries paid directly into their banks in the U.S. and even the half they were left with was three or four times what we were getting!

Instead of sharing a small apartment in an overcrowded area downtown as many foreigners had to, often the Americans lived up in the hills by the Hilton Hotel, like the Shah's relatives. They felt safe behind the high walls with their large gardens and swimming pools and their servants.

They didn't have to buy local produce from the sellers on the street. Oh no. They had special privileges and could shop at the American Commissary for all the goodies from back home, even to the same kind of toothpaste and soap they were used to buying at their favorite supermarket.

While those from other countries had only the decaying British Club, which boasted just a few faded leather chairs and a dartboard, Americans wined and dined, swam and played tennis at the plush and exclusive American Club high in the cool foothills above the city.

As we ate (and enjoyed) chelo kebab or juju kebab (there is no such thing as shish kebab, incidentally) in a little Iranian restaurant, our friends from the U.S. munched their hot dogs, hamburgers and french fries in the American Club or the Commissary restaurant.

It seems ludicrous, somehow, but the first time in my life that I tasted corn on the cob and blueberry pie was in Iran — once when I was taken by friends to the American Club. The food had been flown in frozen so the Americans would feel at home.

It may be several years later, but right now that meal is starting to make me feel a little sick.

The trouble is the Americans were everywhere and nowhere. They were the invisible helpers who stayed aloof. As far as the Iranians were concerned, they were too good to be part of anything that wasn't American. And everywhere they tipped with arrogance because money is the answer to everything. Or is it?

Undoubtedly, outside of Iran today world sympathy lies with America. And everyone prays the remaining hostages will be released unharmed from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Already, some U.S. politicians have said this incident, though frightening and frustrating, has done more to unite the American people than anything since the Korean War.

Perhaps it will do something, as well, toward making Americans take another look at their policy — and their behavior — abroad.

Bionic dog fund pitch not needed, says CNIB

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A new dog training school in Victoria is soliciting money door to door to provide guide dogs for the blind, although authorities and spokesmen for the blind say there is no need for such a service in Canada.

Bionic Dogs School, 660 Discovery, recently sent out leaflets asking for money which said that people "have to travel to the United States at great expense" to get a dog.

"We are asking for your help; the Blind are in great need. Give a blind person a well-trained dog and you give him a new life and a best friend," said the leaflet.

Blind individuals and officials of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind told the Times that some of the claims are misleading, especially about expense.

Blind Canadians do have to travel to the U.S. to obtain a guide dog but the maximum cost is $150 at one school and airfare to California at the other.

And even these token costs can be absorbed for someone with a demonstrated need and inability to pay.

"This is unnecessary and totally impractical," said Michael Brodsky of Victoria, who has a guide dog and is chairman of the Out of Sight Club.

"It's certainly not connected to the CNIB," David Chappell of Vancouver, public affairs director of the CNIB for B.C., said of the Bionic Dogs School pitch.

There is no need for a Canadian guide dog school since guide dog organizations in the U.S. supply the 50 or so dogs a year required by Canadians, he said.

"All these schools are more than happy to accept Canadian students," said Chappell. No person in Canada is not getting a dog who needs one.

Dog trainer Gail Schellenberger said Bionic Dogs School is in the process of establishing a non-profit society to undertake training of guide dogs for the blind.

She said today in an interview she is to be the secretary of the society. Others behind the school are Raymond J. Boyle and Monique Manseau.

Although the CNIB has tried to discourage them, the school is determined to establish the guide dog school here, she said.

"Our biggest buck right now is the CNIB because they're opposed to anything new," she said. "We're really serious in what we're doing. It's not a big joke."

Isabel Beveridge, district administrator for the CNIB in Victoria, said the three principals behind the school asked her last week for CNIB support but she turned them down.

The CNIB has a good agreement with two U.S. guide dog schools — Seeing Eye Inc. of Morristown, N.J. and Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc. of San Rafael, Calif. — under which it pays a certain amount of money and the schools supply Canadians with guide dogs.

"No way could a school be set up here — it would cost millions," said Beveridge.

She said she told them it would be a duplication of services and would not be money well-spent.

The operators told her their goal was to raise $200,000 to start the operation.

Schellenberger said they have raised money already but didn't know how much.

Beveridge said none has been turned over to the CNIB.

She said the CNIB first heard about it three or four weeks ago when individuals approached by the school for donations called to ask if it was associated with the CNIB. Beveridge said the school recently had a canister set up in Hillside shopping mall seeking money.

The cost of a guide dog is low — free if the blind person can't pay anything. Seeing Eye Inc. absorbs all the costs — about $6,000 to $8,000 per dog.

Seeing Eye — which supplies about half the guide dogs in the U.S. and Canada and where Chappell got his animal — provides the trained dog, flies the individual to Morristown for 3½ weeks of training and familiarization with the animal and puts him up in a hotel — all for $150.

That can be repaid at $1 a month. If the blind person can't afford even that, money is available from other sources, he said.

"All of the schools are extremely well-endowed."

Guide Dogs for the Blind supplies about 25 per cent of the dogs to blind British Columbians. (There are only 59 blind persons in B.C. with guide dogs.)

Brodsky, whose dog comes from GDBI, said the California school operates in similar fashion to Seeing Eye.

Referring to the leaflet's claim that the blind are in great need, Brodsky said "this is totally untrue." There's no problem in Canada for a blind person to get a dog, he said.

Playboy bomb bombs

The person who left a brown paper bag containing an empty bottle wrapped in a Playboy magazine in the lobby of the federal building at 1230 Government Tuesday afternoon can collect the pieces at the Victoria police station.

The owner should be prepared, however, to answer a few questions.

The package bound with black electrician's tape and left leaning against the wall was discovered by building supervisor Kenneth Curtis shortly before 3 p.m.

Curtis thought it looked suspicious. City police agreed.

Officers evacuated the building, the adjoining post office and Bank of Montreal, cordoned off the block and called in the Armed Forces bomb disposal unit.

The bomb squad wasn't about to take any chances either.

It gingerly attached a detonating cap to the package, ran a wire out the front door to a point about 100 feet down the street and pressed the button.

A crowd waiting expectantly for a loud bang heard nothing but a pop, the sound of the detonating cap going off.

Police weren't able to say what kind of bottle was in the package. The explosion ripped it to pieces.

The magazine centrefold met the same fate.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me if there was a group of people named the Beaker Folk? W.T.

A. Yes. It's a name given to a group of people who brought the knowledge of metal-working to Europe. They settled in England and Ireland around 1800 B.C. They are responsible for building stone circles found in Britain. The famous Stonchenge circle is one.

Q. What is a boll-worm? T.C.

A. Larvae of a moth which attacks the bolls or seed pods of the cotton plant.

Q. Nurse Edith Cavell was shot in the First World War on the grounds she was a British spy. Can you tell me who signed her death warrant? A.B.

A. General Moritz Ferdinand von Bissing, who was serving as governor of Belgium when the country came under German rule.

Cougars are just two different cats

By ERNIE FEDORUK

How do you figure the Victoria Cougars?

They came within one second of achieving a hockey rarity in one period but looked like different cats in the other two 20-minute sessions of Tuesday's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

One good period didn't offset the defensive mediocrity of the other two, and that enabled Seattle Breakers to continue creating problems for the Western Division leaders.

Tuesday's problem was score-wise. It was 6-4, in favor of the pesky Breakers who now have dealt Victoria three of their five losses this season.

The Cougars manhandled the Breakers easily, 8-3, in their previous Memorial Arena appearance. If you're wondering what happened Tuesday, you're missing an obvious explanation: It's junior hockey. Rarely predictable, especially in October and November.

In those months, mental preparation for a game isn't quite as intense as it is in March and April, when hockey's playoff system makes each game ultra-important.

"Seattle came to play," was the unbiased observation of Rudy Pilous, former coach of Victoria's pro Maple Leafs as well as Chicago Black Hawks and junior teams in St. Catharines and Brandon, "and Victoria didn't put their skates on until the second period."

"It happens all the time in junior hockey," said Pilous, now scouting for Detroit Red Wings.

The psychological differences may have been important Tuesday, but Seattle's cause also was aided by glaring defensive inadequecies. Victoria netminder Kevin Eastman did not have a good game. Neither did some of the defencemen or forwards who were supposed to provide support in the Victoria zone.

At the other end of the ice, Ken Hodge was stung for one "soft" goal but had some good answers for 33 of Victoria's other 36 shots.

Hodge was especially brilliant in the second period when the Cougars came within one second of holding Seattle to a shutout in the shots-on-goal department. Seattle's only direct shot at Eastman came at the 19:59 mark when Dean Postlewaite broke in the clear but was stopped by the Victoria goalie.

In the same 20-minute stretch, Cougars managed 15 direct shots at Hodge but scored only twice. That tied the game 3-3 but Mike Mesic and Joe Ward, both cashing in on glaring defensive mistakes by the Cougars, put Seattle ahead 5-3 and Tom Stanger, scoring into an open net in the dying seconds as the result of still another obvious error, assured Seattle of victory.

In the only other game Tuesday, Gord Stafford scored twice to pace Billings Bighorns to a 5-2 victory over Saskatoon Blades.

BRIEFLY: Assistant Dave Andrews again handled the Cougars on the bench as Cougar coach Jack Shupe completed his two-game suspension . . . Cougar winger Bob Smith sat out the game because of knee infection that required draining . . . Cougars, already committed to play Russian and Czechoslovakian teams at Memorial Arena in December, have arranged another international match . . . the Swedish national junior team will play in Victoria Jan. 7.

Breakers have had a busy week shuffling players . . . Centre Murray Matheson has been recalled from Seattle's affiliate team in Kamloops . . . Also making his first appearance as a Breaker was forward Larry Roberts, obtained from Brandon Wheat Kings in exchange for John Strait.

GOALKEEPER Ken Hodge of Seattle Breakers proved to be stumbling block in more ways than one to Victoria Cougars in Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena, Tuesday. Here Mark Morrison (23) falls over Hodge on edge of goal crease. Otherwise Hodge stopped 33 of 37 shots in Breakers 6-4 win.

Ernie McLean pleads not guilty

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Ernie McLean, coach of New Westminster Bruins of the Western Hockey League, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to a charge of harassing a 19-year-old woman at a game here last Friday.

McLean, 47, did not appear in court, but entered the plea through his lawyer, Michael Schrunk. A pre-trial conference was scheduled for Dec. 31.

McLean is charged with pushing and shoving Jackie M. Jones following a game between New Westminster and Portland Winter Hawks, won by Portland, 5-1.

He was charged with fourth-degree assault but the district attorney's office lowered the charge to harassment, a Class B misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Earlier this year, seven members of the Bruins pleaded guilty to common assault on two Winter Hawks players during a game last March. The players were barred from playing in league games at any level until Dec. 1.

Carl can't forgive 'lack of respect'

EDMONTON (CP) — Carl Crennel thinks that when they hand out the awards for the Canadian Football League's top players prior to Sunday's Grey Cup game in Montreal, he should be sitting at the head table as the east conference's defensive nominee.

He will be in Montreal this week, but he'll be wearing an Edmonton uniform when the western conference Eskimos meet his former Montreal Alouette teammates in the Grey Cup.

Crennel hasn't gotten over the bitterness he felt in the wake of the trade by Alouette coach Joe Scannella, who sent him to Edmonton for future considerations with three games left in the season.

He still hurts from what he considers the ruthless way he was pushed aside after holding down the starting middle linebacking spot on the Alouettes since he joined them in 1972.

Reports had Scannella making the move to give Crennel's job to rookie Tom Cousineau, the number one pick in this year's National Football League draft whom Montreal stole with a lucrative contract offer. Cousineau had spent most of the season playing unhappily as an outside linebacker.

Crennel said he knew from the beginning of the season he would eventually be replaced and said he told Scannella that if Cousineau was being groomed for his job, he'd like to go elsewhere. But that didn't happen until last month.

"I don't think I can ever forgive Joe Scannella," said Crennel. "The way he did it was very cowardly-like . . . "

"Me being the veteran I am, the type of ballplayer I am, they could have shown me a little more respect than to wait until Sunday and call me in and tell me, 'Hey, we've got to make a move,' for a reason which I thought was a very poor excuse. He said I wasn't good enough to play with his team, which is bull----."

When Crennel goes to Montreal he'll have the satisfaction of knowing someone else agrees with his assessment of himself. He was named middle linebacker on the eastern conference all-star team announced Tuesday.

"Normally, my objective is to be the best player, shoot for the Schenley," he says. "That didn't work out because I got traded, because I probably should've represented Montreal as the defensive nominee."

Crennel said he is trying to put the Montreal episode behind him but his new team-mates say he badly wants to beat his old club.

"He wants to kick their butts just as badly as he wants to keep breathing," said Dan Kepley, who lines up beside Crennel when the two play Edmonton's dual middle linebacking defence.

"They used to be my team-mates and now they're my opponents," said Crennel. "I'm sure they'll play me just as hard as I play them.

"I really don't have anything to prove to Joe (Scannella) because he had his mind made up (to trade him) a year and 13 games ago."

When he left Montreal, Crennel criticized Cousineau for not trying hard enough at outside linebacker. He still says Cousineau's play was hurting the over-all defence, but: "I have nothing against Tom. Tom is a good guy and he has a great future if he applies himself accordingly."

Although he would have preferred to say in Montreal because it is closer to his West Virgina home, Crennel said he thinks he's probably come to a better football club.

"I think Edmonton is a very good team talent-wise. In some positions I think they might be over-all a little bit better than Montreal. They tend to put the best people they have in specific positions, which I think Montreal over the years has been a little bit hesitant."

Edmonton's so-called "three-four" defence, with three linemen and four linebackers, including Crennel, should be effective in containing Montreal's ground-oriented attack, he said.

"If we can shut (David) Green off, shut (quarterback Joe) Barnes off and shut the receivers . . . if we can take that away from them we shouldn't have that much of a problem if we can come up with a big offensive day."

What scoring slump? what winning streak?

Times News Services

So much for the slump of Marcel Dionne and the Los Angeles Kings' hot line — it lasted all of one game.

So much too for the Vancouver Canucks' winning streak. It lasted four games.

Both changed at the same time.

Dionne and linemates Dave Taylor and Charlie Simmer returned to form Tuesday night — Dionne and Taylor each scored twice and Simmer had three assists — at the expense of the Canucks in the Pacific Coliseum.

The Canucks saw their four-game winning streak vanish as the Kings outclassed them 5-1 in a loosely-played game which proved once again that Dionne centres the most dangerous line in the National Hockey League.

Dionne and his wingers were blanked for the first time this season Saturday in Los Angeles by Montreal Canadiens.

"Our first goal, the one I got in the first period, set the tempo for us and showed Vancouver that we came ready to play," said Dionne. "Our line knows that it can score and tonight we played a good team game, with all the lines working hard.

"Vancouver looked a little tired mentally and we were hungry. We didn't make any real bad mistakes and the Canucks threw away some bad passes which we capitalized on."

Dionne now has a league-leading 19 goals and 43 points, while Simmer has 17 goals and 33 points and Taylor a healthy 13 goals and 32 points, giving them the top three places in the NHL scoring race.

The Canucks, who had an inspiring win here Sunday over Montreal, came out flat and made more mistakes in one game than they had for the last 12 games, said coach Harry Neale.

"We weren't skating, we weren't concentrating, we had fewer takeouts than they did, we lost too many faceoffs, we made too many long passes and we had too many turnovers in our own end," Neale said.

Glen Goldup also scored for the Kings as they moved to within three points of leading Montreal in the Norris Division.

The Canucks remained atop the Smythe Division with a six-point lead over St. Louis Blues and Chicago Black Hawks.

Ron Sedlbauer scored the Vancouver goal in the opening period, but missed a glorious scoring chance in the last period, as did captain Don Lever.

Goalkeeper Mario Lessard of the Kings came up with a few key saves when needed, especially in the second period.

Meanwhile, New York Islanders, a team on the way up in recent years, have been heading in the opposite direction so far this season.

The Islanders, touted as Stanley Cup material the last two winters, have played less than .500 hockey after completing more than one-fifth their 1979-80 schedule.

St. Louis Blues, winless in five previous starts, defeated New York 6-3 Tuesday, leaving the Islanders with a record of six wins, three ties and eight losses after 17 games.

Only five of the 21 NHL teams have fewer points than the Islanders, sitting fourth in the competitive Patrick Division. The Islanders have lost four of their last five games.

In other games, Boston Bruins edged Quebec Nordiques 5-3 and Colorado Rockies tied Washington Capitals 3-3.

Blair Chapman, Bernie Federko, Blake Dunlop, Perry Turnbull, Larry Patey and Brian Sutter scored for St. Louis.

Mike Bossy, Brian Trottier and Clark Gillies scored for New York.

In Quebec, Don Marcotte's second-period goal, scored while his club was a man short, proved the winner for the Bruins.

Rick Middleton, Jean Ratelle, Peter McNab and Ray Bourque, into an empty net to ensure the win with 21 seconds on the clock, also scored for Boston.

Defenceman Pierre Lacroix had two goals and Bob Fitchner one for Quebec.

In Denver, Jack Valiquette scored a power-play goal with 1:22 remaining in the game to earn the Rockies a tie with Washington.

Jim Taylor returning to Victoria as speaker at celebrity dinner

Jim Taylor is coming home and will be a guest speaker at the 13th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel, March 17.

Taylor, a sports columnist with The Vancouver Province and an editorial commentator on radio and television, got his start in the sport reporting business in Victoria with The Daily Colonist in 1955.

He moved from Victoria to The Vancouver Times in 1964. He returned to The Colonist for a brief spell when that mainland paper folded, moved back to Vancouver with The Vancouver Sun in 1966, and over to the rival Province earlier this year following a lengthy strike at Pacific Press.

Taylor was born in Nipawin, Sask., received his early education in Winnipeg and moved to Victoria in 1953. He attended Victoria High. He is married and has two children.

Busy is the word for Taylor, who writes five columns a week for The Province may be seen on five television spots and has 15 radio editorials.

Taylor will be joined at the head-table by other well-known sports personalities and the 1979 nominees for Greater Victoria's male and female athletes of the year and team of the year.

Other awards include Sportsman of the Year and the Saanich Kiwanis Distinguished Service Award.

Tickets for the dinner are available from sports departments of the Victoria Times, The Daily Colonist, CFAX, CKDA, CJVI, CHEK-TV and the Sportcaster.

'500' club grows

Jack Ramsay and Gene Shue have joined the exclusive 500-win club in the National Basketball Association.

Red Holzman, already a member, joined an even more exclusive club when his New York Knicks did a number on Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

Ramsay, the Portland coach, and Shue, of San Diego, each reached the euphoric plateau of 500 NBA victories after the Trail Blazers defeated Los Angeles Lakers 114-99 and the Clippers stopped Phoenix Suns, 117-110.

Holzman, meanwhile, became only the second coach in NBA history to win 500 games with one team when the Knicks defeated the Rockets 130-125 in overtime.

Red Auerbach, who did it with Boston Celtics, is the only other NBA coach to win that many games with one team.

The new 500 Club members joined Auerbach, Holzman and Dick Motta in the exclusive group.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Philadelphia defeated San Antonio 118-114; Denver stopped Chicago 124-91; Atlanta turned back Detroit 109-105; Cleveland whipped Utah 119-107 and Kansas City edged Golden State, 112-109.

Maurice Lucas and Tom Owens led Portland's victory with 24 points each. The Blazers, who had a 12-4 edge in offensive rebounding in the first half, took a 49-37 lead at the half.

They increased that lead to 55-40 early in the third quarter before the Lakers, behind Norm Nixon, rallied to cut the lead to 65-61 with 4:53 left in the period. Then Owens and Lucas contributed to seal Portland's victory.

Guards Brian Taylor, Freeman Williams and Lloyd Free combined for 81 points as San Diego defeated Phoenix; Taylor scored a season-high 28 points, Williams had 27 and Free, the NBA's leading scorer, contributed 26 as the Clippers won their third straight game.

European curlers accept advice and profit from it

By BILL WALKER

Last spring the Air Canada Silver Broom competition was in Berne, Switzerland. Next spring it will be in Moncton, New Brunswick. The dates are March 24-30.

And, if you're thinking of going, or even thinking about thinking about it, a good way to get warmed up might be to look at a film on the 1979 Air Canada Silver Broom World Curling Championship.

At the same time, you might like to tie in a showing of last year's Uniroyal World Junior Curling Championship at Moose Jaw. They're both excellent viewing and both available.

Premieres of the two films were shown here this week to a selected list of curling officials and media reps. They show many of the highlights of the competitions and maybe also give an insight into why Europeans have suddenly taken over from Canadians in a sport Canada thought it once owned.

Canada didn't make the Berne final, it will be recalled. But Norway and Switzerland did.

And all curlers who see the film can't help but agonize with skip Peter Attinger of Switzerland, who drew through the house on his final rock giving the title to Norway's Kristian Soerum.

Soerum, on his final rock, had ducked behind cover and, while the second guessers figured Attinger would follow Soerum in, he decided otherwise, went for the cold draw and missed before more than 10,000 Swiss curling fans, the largest curling crowd in history. It was quite a sight.

It was also a European victory, which isn't new, because quick, now, when was the last time Canada won and when was the last time Canada had a finalist in the Silver Broom competition? That's your homework.

The European secret is clear enough. They have accepted coaching, which is something Canadian curlers won't always do. The Europeans knew they didn't know it all when they got involved, so they did something about it. And they have accepted this advice from mostly Canadian instructors: Ray Turnbull, Warren Hansen and Wally Ursuliak have conducted clinics in Europe for several years now.

And while the Europeans don't generally have the quality of competition Canadian rinks have, they have overcome this by a diligent physical training program and practice. Yes, plain, old-fashioned practice!

They have accepted what to them is something new, they aren't afraid to try things, and they have been successful at it. And now it's Canada which is playing catch-up.

The junior film is just as interesting with some excellent shot making and some equally agonizing moments. Young curlers give vent to their emotions more graphically than their elders and it shows. Local viewers may recall seeing Canada's junior representative, Darren Fish, here in last year's Canadian junior finals at Victoria Club.

Fish didn't make the finals in the Moose Jaw event, nor did he win here, but his unique style of pushing a rock, rather than lifting it off the ice, has since been described as probably the right way to go.

Don Barcome of Grand Forks, North Dakota, was the winner of the Junior World. He showed a positive approach, appeared to be a very confident young man and will be a visitor in town for the VI 90 New Dominion Hotel Curling Classic at Playland Curling Club next week.

At any rate these films, which run about 30 minutes each, are available.

The Air Canada Silver Broom film may be obtained by contacting either Air Canada district manager Glen Steeves or sales manager George Davidson at 382-5146, and the Uniroyal World Junior film by getting in touch with Uniroyal sales representative Bill Carver at 592-6459.

After that you can make your own plans.

Three excellent books good gifts for skiers

With snow starting to accumulate on Vancouver Island mountains and Christmas not too far off, three books should rate high on the list of gifts to give your favorite skier.

One, certainly the most impressive, is The Complete Skiing Handbook, edited by Mark Heller and Doug Godlington and published by Collins.

The price tag of $24.95 may seem a little steep, but the cost is reasonable in terms of the information offered.

Both alpine and cross-country skiing are covered in great detail and the book is lavishly illustrated with drawings as well as black and white and color photographs.

Obviously, if one book is to cover everything, it can't go into great detail on any one point. But the authors here manage to impart just the right amount of information on most of the subjects associated with skiing.

Some of the alpine topics covered, which are missing in similar treatments of the subject, include advice on equipment, exercises, your first day on the slope, basic and special techniques, picking your best route depending on snow and terrain, skiing for children, touring and ski mountaineering, safety in off-trail touring and weather lore.

The section on cross-country skiing is also well done.

Bonus items in the book, also missing from similar publications, are tips on winter driving, ski photography, skiing and the law and a list of top United States and Canadian ski areas.

Another book to consider is The Skier's Encyclopedia, edited by Heller and published by Random House.

It costs a little less at $16.50 but may be a little less desirable because of a European format and lack of specific details on the various aspects of ski techinique.

However, the strong point of this book is readability. It also covers some aspects of skiing not found in the first book, such as history, artificial ski surfaces, skiing for the disabled, conservation and resort planning and a worldwide guide to ski areas.

Another "plus" factor that should appeal to spectators as well as active skiers is a section on competitive skiing — especially with the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., coming up in February. It provides basic background material on all of the alpine and cross-country disciplines.

And, thirdly, there is the first publication in paperback of Inner Skiing, written by Timothy Gallwey and Bob Kriegel and published by Bantam.

Costing a mere $2.75, it serves as an important complement to either of the first two books.

While the others deal in the concrete aspects of skiing, this publication delves into the mental attitude necessary to reach your full potential.

All of us have experienced times when mind and body seem to act as a cohesive whole and produce "impossible" results. This book offers a way to maximize those moments.

"The purpose of Inner Skiing is to increase the magic of skiing and decrease the misery — to bypass the frustrations which inhibit its joy and freedom, and to learn how to reach that state of mind in which we not only appreciate the sport but perform at our best," the authors state.

"The premise of this approach is that primarily it is neither external conditions nor lack of technical expertise which prevents us from experiencing skiing at its best, but the doubts, fears and thoughts within our own heads.

"The Inner Skiier comes to recognize that his greatest challenge, and consequently his greatest possibilities, lie in overcoming the self-imposed mental limitations which prevent the full expression of his physical potential."

Take it from me, the approach does work.

Hrabosky not mad, not for $5.9 million

ATLANTA (AP) — He may be mad but he's not crazy.

With a newly inked five-year contract reported to be worth $5.9 million, baseball's Mad Hungarian, Al Hrabosky, hinted he was looking to the future when he chose to pitch for Atlanta Braves next season rather than a pennant contender.

Twelve other teams bid for the left-handed relief pitcher in the free agent draft, including World Series champion Pittsburgh Pirates, California Angels, New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox.

During a news conference Tuesday, Hrabosky said he chose to sign with the Braves instead of any of the others because he was impressed with another baseball noncomformist, Atlanta owner Ted Turner.

"One thing I've noticed in Ted's association with the Atlanta Braves — everybody can say a total effort has been made to make it a much more productive ballclub," he said. "Ted has made a tremendous commitment to bringing a winner here."

It was not lost on the Mad Hungarian, who earned his nickname with dramatic pre-pitch tactics, that Turner owns Atlanta's WTBS television station, which broadcasts over a nationwide cable system.

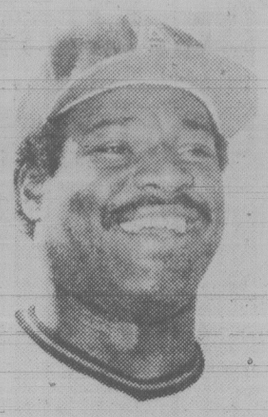

Hrabosky wants a broadcasting career when his baseball career ends, something the Turner Broadcasting System can provide.

But he insisted that his contract, with payments reportedly spread over the next 35 years, is "strictly baseball," and does not include "a single word" about broadcasting.

"Atlanta was my first choice," he added.

"It was between the Dodgers and Atlanta," said Hrabosky, who became a free agent after pitching for Kansas City Royals for two seasons. "My wife and I are both from Southern California, and we didn't want to go back to Southern California. This is the environment we wanted."

Hrabosky spent five years with St. Louis Cardinals before joining the Royals. He had his best season in 1975, when he had a 13-5 record.

DON BAYLOR
. . . 20 first-place votes

Baylor first Angel MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Baylor became the first member of California Angels to win the American League's most-valuable-player award when the outfielder-designated hitter was made an overwhelming choice today by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Baylor collected 20 of a possible 28 first-place votes from the special BBWAA committee to win by a large margin over outfielder Ken Singleton of the American League champion Baltimore Orioles.

The California slugger, who led the Angels to their first title ever in the AL West with a league-leading 139 runs batted in, 36 home runs and a .296 batting average, piled up 347 points to 241 for Singleton.

Third-baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals was given a 226-point total for the third spot.

Boston's Jim Rice, last year's MVP, finished fifth with 124 points, behind clubmate Fred Lynn's 160½.

The host UVic Vikings have announced the first-round draw and among the entrants is the defending tournament-champion Calgary Dinosaurs.

The Dinos and Vikings, heavy favorites to meet in the Canada West playoff, could also clash in the Pacific Rim final.

The first round Dec 2, a Friday, pits UBC Thunderbirds against Winnipeg Wesmen at 1 p.m., Simon Fraser Clansmen against York Yeomen of Toronto at 3:30, Calgary against Seattle Dynasties at 7 and Vikings against Lakehead Norwesters of Thunder Bay at 9.

Saturday's draw has Friday's losers meeting in games at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. and the winners meeting at 7 and 9.

The consolation final is Sunday at 1:30 p.m. while the championship game starts at 3.

Meanwhile, UVic's husband-wife combination of Billy Loos and Carol Turney-Loos are setting the scoring pace in their CWUAA basketball divisions.

Billy, who plays for Vikings, leads the men's league with 105 points, 17 more than runner-up Perry Mirkovich of Lethbridge Pronghorns.

Gerald Kazanowski, rookie Eli Pasquale and Ted Anderson of Vikings are also in the top 10.

Carol of the Vikettes leads the women's section with 98 points, two more than Agnes Baker of UBC Thunderettes.

Vikettes' Luanne Hebb, the defending scoring champion, is third with 67 points.

Vikings, 4-0 in conference play, are headed for Waterloo, Ont., and the Naismith Classic, starting Thursday. They meet Carleton Ravens of Ottawa, second-ranked in Ontario last season, in the first round.

Vikettes, also 4-0, continue conference play with a doubleheader Friday and Saturday in Lethbridge.

Pay for lost wages set for B.C. athletes

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia athletes will be paid for lost wages and could receive up to $1,900 a year in assistance from the provincial government in an effort to increase B.C.'s representation at the Olympic, Commonwealth and Pan American Games.

Provincial secretary Hugh Curtis has announced the $250,000 assistance program that is intended to aid up to 170 athletes who are just below the national level of assistance and do not qualify for the federally-run assistance program.

In the B.C. scheme, up to $1,900 will be made available to high performance athletes who are employed and $1,650 for those who are student-athletes.

The athletes will receive $720 a year for equipment, coaching, club memberships and physiotherapy, and up to $500 annually for travel expenses. Students will get up to $600 to offset tuition, while regularly employed athletes will be compensated at the rate of $50 a day for lost wages to a maximum of $1,000 annually.

The program will be carried out by the recreation and fitness branch of Curtis' ministry.

Curtis said he hopes the program will help more B.C. athletes achieve a place on Canada's national sports teams. Fitness branch figures show that only 16 per cent of Canada's 'A' carded athletes, those within the top eight in the world or among the top four teams, are residents of B.C.

Saanich stages late rush

Saanich Braves started slowly but finished with a rush Tuesday to down Fuller Lake Flyers 11-6 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

The win pushed Braves 11 points ahead of second-place Oak Bay Trios.

Flyers had a 2-1 lead after the first period and the score was deadlocked 6-6 going into the final 20 minutes.

Scott Connors led Braves with three goals, Ron Brooks and Ian McLean added two each and singles were contributed by Jim Michaels, Tracy Patterson, Bruce Tuck and Marty Irvine.

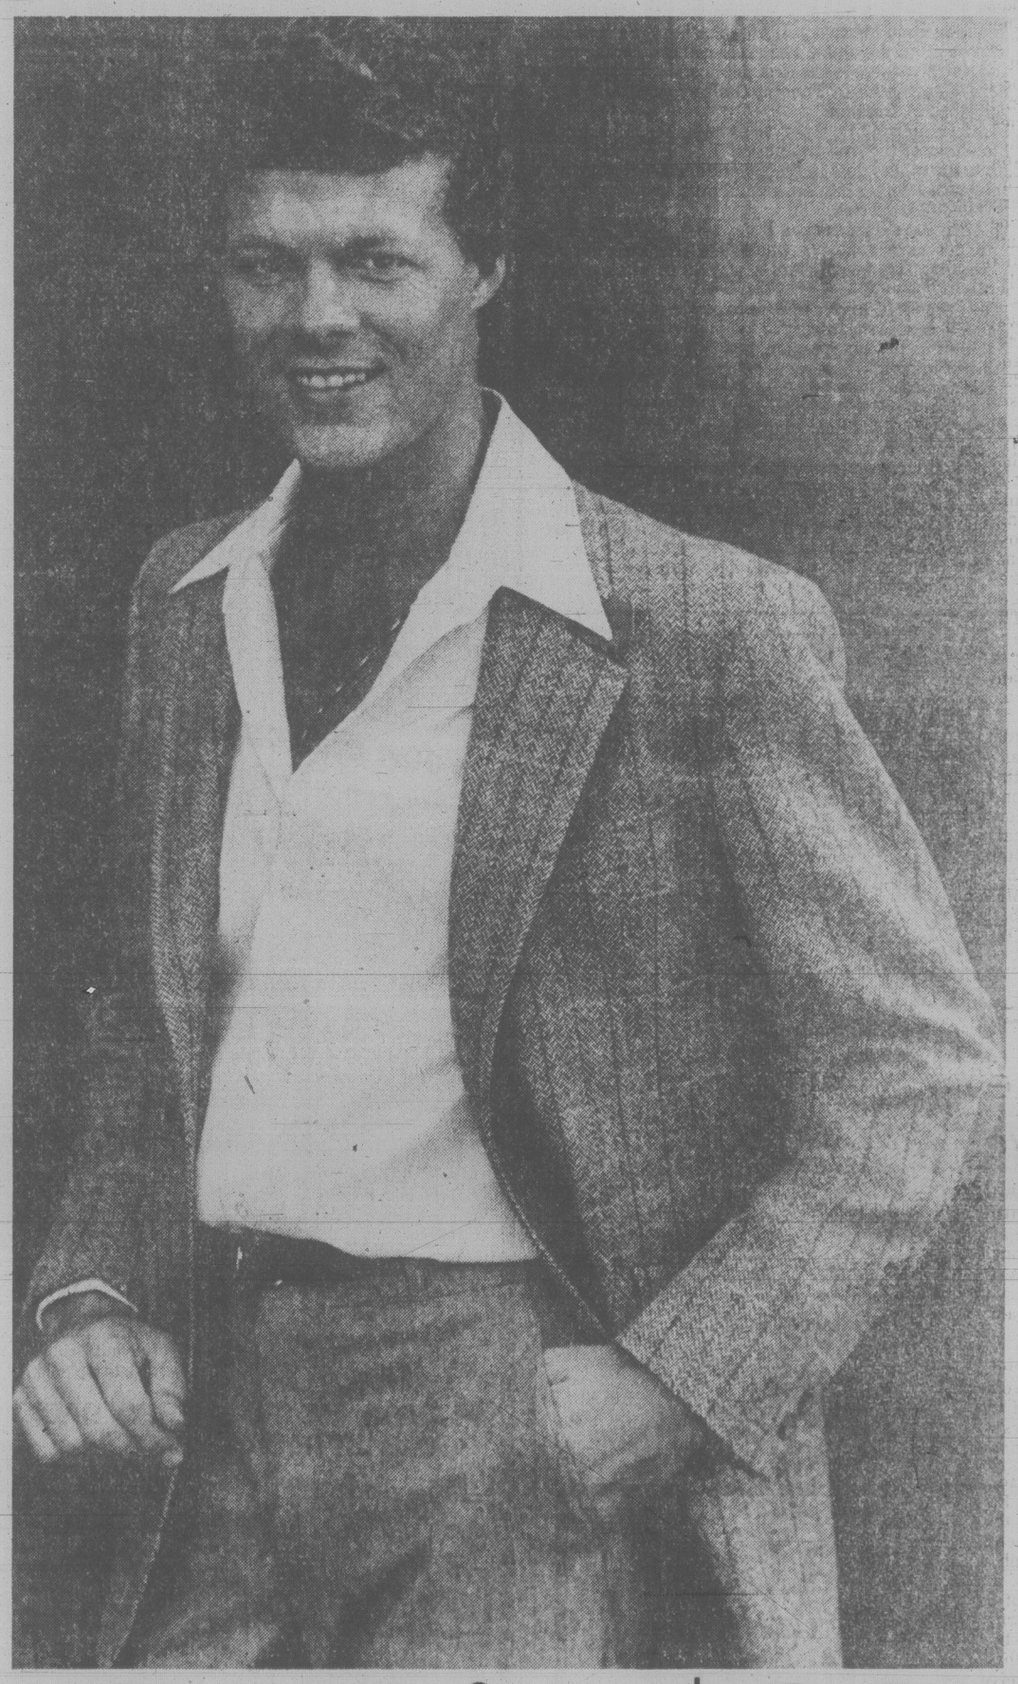

Greg Hollett and Brent McKie each scored twice for the Flyers while Ken Ellison and Keith Mazurenko added singles.

Ron Allan and Marty Wakelyn combined to block 40 shots on the Saanich net while Jim Lebitschnig and Mark Brown made 38 saves for Fuller Lake.

Skillings needs rally for eighth win

The Steve Skillings rink is still unbeaten and won its eighth straight game in the Harley Davidson Series of Curling at the Racquet Club, Tuesday, but not before it was forced to score three in the 10th end to get by runner-up Don Matheson (5-3) 9-7.

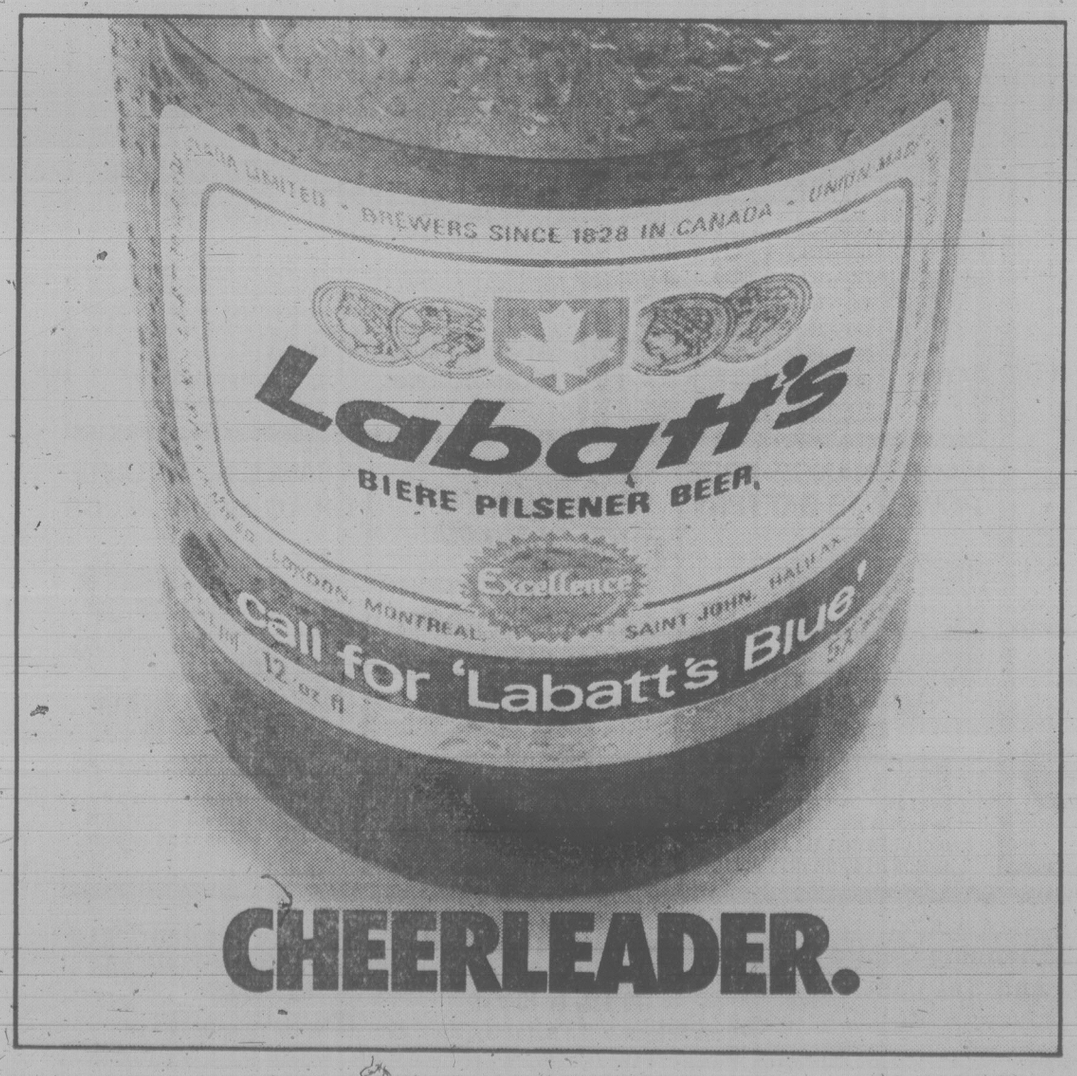

In other games, Tim Horrigan (4-4) defeated Bruce Coulter (4-4) 8-5, Al Frame (3-5) went to an extra end for a 7-6 win over Bob Hawkes (3-5), Barry Harvey (3-5) downed Barry Moore (3-5) 7-4, and Bill Morris (3-5) stole three in the ninth end to defeat Brad Clarke (4-4) 9-5.

Hockey goes 'glub, glub' deeper than you think

By JIM CRERAR

About 10 years ago a group of scuba enthusiasts in Vancouver beat the boredom of pool diving by inventing a game called underwater hockey.

Sound a little wild? Maybe, but the game is now played in at least seven countries and has even created something of a political splash.

Vancouver is considered a hotbed, naturally, and the sport has also caught on in Victoria where there are three clubs — one at UVic's McKinnon pool, another at the Naden pool and a third connected with the Pacific Sea Searchers diving club.

Nearly 150 players are registered with the Underwater Hockey Association of B.C. There are clubs in Port Hardy and Dawson Creek as well as Vancouver and Victoria.

Underwater hockey also is played in Alberta and Quebec.

The game is exactly what its name implies — hockey under water. It involves two teams of six players each (seven if one of them is a woman) who compete at the bottom of any standard pool.

The idea is to propel a stainless steel or brass puck weighing just under 3¼ pounds into the opposing team's goal, a clearly-marked area on the pool wall 1½ metres wide.

The puck is steared with a wood or plastic stick consisting of a six-inch handle and six-inch-long playing area that's 3½ inches wide at the end. Slightly concave edges on the playing area nestle the puck.

It's an infraction to carry the puck on the top of the stick or to hold it in position with a finger. It's legal to hoist the puck when shooting, though, and expert players have been known to plane the puck off the pool's bottom a distance up to 15 feet.

Games last from 30 minutes to an hour and are played in two halves.

Players wear an approved diving mask, snorkel and fins and are allowed to surface for air, of course.

"There's a similar game in Great Britain called octopush," said Kevin Bates, a fourth-year marine biology student at UVic. "I don't know which came first, octopush or underwater hockey, but the two have combined into an international game. There were seven or eight countries in the world championships last year — Canada, the U.S., Great Britain, France, Italy, South Africa, Australia and possibly New Zealand.

"The world championships this year in Great Britain were cancelled because Great Britain insisted South Africa be allowed to come."

South Africa, barred by the International Olympic Committee because of its apartheid practices, is apparently on the International Swimming Federation's black list as well. That body, whose jurisdiction embraces underwater hockey, warned against playing South Africa or the tournament was called off.

Vancouver, which won the global title in 1978 in Florida, is bidding to host next year's world event.

Like ice hockey, there are penalties ranging from two to five minutes for standing on the pool bottom while play is in progress, pushing the puck with other than the stick, holding or carrying the puck, interfering with an opponent or trying to remove his equipment, deliberate injury, making unsportsmanlike comments or gestures and delaying the game.

Most minor infractions draw a caution from one of two underwater referees. A third referee on the pool deck keeps track of scoring, penalty time and over-all conduct of the game.

"There's some roughness," Bates admitted. "One of the major injuries is skinned knuckles on the bottom of the pool."

Many wear a protective glove on their stick hand, which also eliminates cracked knuckles from other players' sticks.

Broken ear drums are another hazard.

Gail Carle, a fourth-year botany student who plays with the Naden club on Tuesday nights and the UVic gang on Fridays, has suffered a broken ear drum.

"It's caused by a combination of water pressure and physical contact," Gail explained. Now she wears ear protectors.

What are the most common infractions?

"Masks sometimes get pulled off," Bates grinned, "and bathing suits have been known to disappear."

"Or the puck disappears in a bathing suit," Gail added.

A Miami era crumbles: Griese out; Strock in MIAMI (AP) — An era may be ending in Miami.

Bob Griese, the quick-thinking, precise-passing quarterback who has led the Dolphins into the playoffs six times in the last 10 years, will be on the bench this Sunday.

Coach Don Shula says he will start veteran backup Don Strock at Baltimore. It will be the first time since Shula came here in 1970 that a healthy Griese will not start an important game.

"Any time you're taking a player of Bob's calibre and magnitude who's accomplished so much, it's hard (to bench him)," Shula said. "This is coaching — what you're faced with."

One of the National Football League's most explosive offences in 1978, the Dolphins have sputtered all season behind the 34-year-old Griese. Strock, a six-year pro at age 29, has produced nine touchdowns in a little over seven quarters this year.

Sunday, he entered the game in the fourth quarter with Dolphins trailing Cleveland 17-10 and hit two quick touchdown passes before the Browns eventually won in overtime.

"I'm going to make the move and start Strock," Shula said. "I felt that he came off the bench and did an outstanding job against Cleveland — put some life in our offence."

"I spoke to Bob and told him my plans," Shula said. "He said he understood and that he will do all he can to try to help. He'll prepare for the game like he always prepares."

Griese, who took over the Dolphins' starting job as a rookie from Purdue in 1967, said, "I'm for the team first and me second.

"I've never said I'm trying to hold onto this job for any length of time. If a change will help the team, I'm all for it."

Griese's slump has been mystifying, particularly since he was coming off one of his finest seasons statistically.

Former envoy eyes Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl T. Smith, the last United States ambassador to Cuba, is among the list of potential buyers for the New York Mets, a spokesman for the club said Tuesday.

The Mets formally announced Monday that the club would be sold before the end of the year, confirming rumors which have circulated for some time.

Smith, a long-time friend of the Payson family, which owns the team, is one of between 20 and 30 bidders for the club, according to Robert Riggs, a partner in the law firm of Carter, Ledyard and Milburn. Riggs was designated by the Mets' board of directors and shareholders to receive offers for the purchase of the team.

"We've had a few calls today," he said. "Most of the people interested in the team contacted us before the formal announcement was made."

The New York Post called Smith the leading candidate to purchase the team.

"At this point, you can not be a leading candidate," Riggs said. "It's still in stage one."

Riggs said Smith "had indicated an interest in purchasing the club previously."

Wilson urges wild-card playoff in CFL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Football League should explore the possibility of using a wild-card playoff system for its playoffs, says centre Al Wilson of B.C. Lions.

Wilson says the current playoff structure, with the top three teams in each conference making it into post-season play, needs to be changed.

The eight-year veteran said he has a plan that will be presented to the CFL Players' Association for discussion in an attempt to get the idea before the league for consideration.

Wilson's idea is that the top teams from the Western and Eastern Football Conferences get a bye into their respective conference finals. Then the second-place teams in each conference play the "other two teams with the most points, no matter which conference they're in."

"The conference winners get a bye into the final and the second-place teams get home-field advantage for the semi-finals, just the way it works now," Wilson said. "But the other two teams can be from either conference or both, depending upon won-lost records."

His plan would make it possible for two WFC, or EFC, teams to make it to the Grey Cup championship game.

"Everybody's a critic, it just might happen," he said. "You could also have an eastern final involving a western team, or the other way around.

"But in those instances the novelty of the thing might carry it. Besides, they do have something. You see the crowd for the eastern final (in Montreal)? Dropped from 64,000 last year to 35,102. Does that tell you something."

The present playoff formula has the second and third-place teams in each conference meeting in the two conference semi-finals, with the winners advancing to the conference finals against the first-place teams.

"Interest is fading because too many teams are out of things too soon," added Wilson. "Look at the final standings this season.

"Winnipeg and Saskatchewan were virtually out of the playoffs at mid-season. But Winnipeg (fourth in the WFC) finished only four points behind Hamilton (third in the EFC). With wild cards there could have been a great race for the last (playoff) spot and it might have gone down to the last weekend."

Wilson admits his plan has a few flaws, but adds that the best teams in the CFL would get into the playoffs. Under the present system, two teams from the WFC and one from the EFC miss the playoffs.

"Doing it with wild cards, the best six teams would be in the playoffs," he said. "And isn't that the way it should be, even if four of them are from the west, or even five?"

Research shows that, for the last nine years, an eastern team with a losing record has been in the playoffs, but only three times in the same period has it happened in the west.

Champ would risk loss of both titles

HALIFAX (CP) — From now on a boxer who holds a Canadian championship must put that title on the line if he is fighting for a Commonwealth title in the same weight class.

The change was announced Monday by Murray Sleep of Halifax, president of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation.

Sleep said the policy was adopted by the federation to eliminate a situation that developed here after the Aug. 28 Commonwealth welterweight title fight between champion Clyde Gray of Toronto and challenger Chris Clarke of Halifax.

Gray was also the Canadian champion and Clarke the No. 1 challenger.

Clarke won the Commonwealth title from Gray but since the Canadian title was not on the line, Gray remained the Canadian champion. Clarke, the Commonwealth champion, was in the incongruous position of still being the No. 1 challenger for the Canadian title.

Last week, Gray regained the Commonwealth title from Clarke by a technical knockout in the 10th round. Gray's Canadian title was also on the line that time.

Henderson no second-stringer

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday he fired linebacker Thomas Henderson instead of demoting him because he figured the former No. 1 draft choice's ego couldn't handle second-string status.

"I decided he couldn't function (on the bench)," said Landry. "It would have been hard for him to handle a second-string role. His ego is such that he needs to start. I definitely thought it would affect the team with him on the sidelines."

Landry told the fifth-year player he was going to be put on waivers but the controversial Henderson, who had held the media spotlight at the Super Bowl in January, announced his retirement at an emotional press conference.

"Yesterday was a trying day," said Landry at his weekly press conference, "but I believe we'll get things back in the groove."

Landry said that if Henderson decides to come out of retirement then the Cowboys will ask a No. 1 draft choice from the team that wants him.

All-Blacks win eighth

EXETER, England (Reuter) — The New Zealand rugby Blacks returned to their winning ways, but were far from convincing in a 16-0 victory over Southwest Division Tuesday.

The tourists bounced back after their 21-9 defeat by the North of England in Otley on Saturday, yet they produced only a mediocre display in the second last match of their 10-game tour.

Their eighth victory since they arrived a month ago came on a goal, a try and two penalties.

England under-21s advance

By REUTERS

England and East Germany advanced to the quarter-finals of the European under-21 soccer championship and Scotland moved closer to adding its name after play on Tuesday.

England outclassed Bulgaria in a Group I match, winning 5-0 and finishing on top of its group with the maximum points.

Garth Crooks scored three for England while Vince Hilaire and Garry Birtles added the others in a game so one-sided that England goalkeeper Chris Woods spent most of the game as a virtual spectator.

East Germany drew 1-1 with the Netherlands to advance from Group IV, coming from behind after the Dutch took a 1-0 lead.

Scotland blanked Belgium 1-0 to strengthen its lead atop Group II with seven points, one more than Belgium over whom they have a game in hand.

George McCluskey scored for the Scottish side.

Guard against interference - Killanin

GENEVA (Reuter) — International Olympic Committee (IOC) president Lord Killanin has again appealed to sports bodies to guard against government interference, and said he hoped no country would boycott the 1980 Olympic Games.

In an address to the American International Club, Lord Killanin referred to a proposed British rugby tour of South Africa next year, and a planned South African rugby tour of France that was vetoed by the French government.

The 65-year-old Irish peer said the IOC was sad that the French government had to intervene, as it would have preferred the appropriate French sports body to have been sensitive to the situation.

"I earnestly implore people in all sports to be very careful of what they do because otherwise governments will interfere, and will interfere more and more," he said.

The planned rugby contacts with South Africa, which is banned from the Olympic Games because of racial discrimination in sport, have raised fears that African countries might boycott the 1980 games as they did the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal.

Wings price starts at $16M

DETROIT (AP) — Charles Walby, a businessman from suburban Bloomfield Hills, says negotiations to purchase Detroit Red Wings start at $16 million.

Walby claims to be part of a group that has expressed interest in purchasing the National Hockey League club.

Lincoln Cavalieri, the Red Wings' vice president, however, denied he ever has talked to Walby or his group.

Saturna lamb-fest simpler, more fun

By MARIE ELLIOTT

Robert and Elaine Schaeffer barbecued lamb this fall for their friends in Lincoln, Mass. It was trussed, turkey-fashion, placed on a complicated spit, then turned and basted over a thick bed of oak wood coals. From Karen Arenson's account in the New York Times we gather that the barbecue was a smashing success, but an awful lot of work.

Here in the beautiful Gulf Islands of British Columbia, Saturna Island is noted for its Lamb Barbecue every Dominion Day. We do things a bit differently from the Schaeffers, however. And although we must barbecue for hundreds of people, when our method is reduced to a backyard scale the work is very easy and therefore a lot more fun for the cook.

Only the odd clump of scrub oak can be found in the Gulf Islands so we must rely on pitch-free Douglas fir to give us the right type of coals for our Saturna event. Alder is second best, but cedar is out — it burns too rapidly. The fire is lit between 4:30 and 5 a.m. in order that it may burn down to the proper amount of coals within three hours. At 7:30 a.m. workers commence placing the lambs 30 inches apart in a semi-circle around the fire. (This summer 26 lambs were required to feed 1,500 people.)

The meat is set about three feet from the edge of the fire which is aproximately eight feet in diameter. Throughout the cooking process the fire is carefully fed so that it will generate the right amount of heat necessary to have the lambs cooked on time.

The Schaeffers placed their lamb onto an aluminum pole, much as one would skewer a roast on a spit, with the pole through the centre of the trussed animal. We barbecue a pig this way for another important annual bash, but we've found the most efficient method for handling such a large amount of lamb is to spread-eagle each carcass on a metal cross which is then stuck into the ground. With the (fatty) back of the animal to the fire the meat can be safely left four or five hours without burning, during which time it is basted with a special sauce piquant.

About 1 p.m. — an hour before serving time — the lambs are almost fully cooked. They are then turned in order to brown the undersides. That's all the effort that is really necessary.

Carving is done quickly and skillfully. Within a short time most of the spectators are seated beneath huge, shady maple trees on Jim Campbell's farm, savoring heaping platefuls of lamb, cole slaw and Spanish rice. No need to ask if they'll be coming back next year!

Now, for the smaller scale. Another Saturna Islander barbecues a single lamb open flat. He likes to turn the carcass at regular intervals and base it frequently with a wine sauce.

This year our friend got excellent results using a large piece of corrugated tin under the fire which acted as a reflector for the hot coals. The meat cooked much faster. A discarded television antenna made an ingenious spit tor the meat.

On our island we may also place a large salmon, wrapped in foil, on the coals an hour or so before serving time — but this is usually done only if there are visitors from Toronto or Montreal to impress. If game laws permit, venison may be substituted for lamb, using this same sauce.

WINE SAUCE

¼ c. salad oil
½ c. sherry wine
2 tbsp. vinegar
½ tsp. salt
2 cloves minced garlic
¼ tsp. dry mustard.

Mix all ingrediegnts well and let stand for an hour before using as a basting sauce.

We're a long way from Massachusetts and Montreal and Toronto, but we think we have the art of barbecuing lamb down to a fine science. In other words, simple — and delicious!

Visitors to annual lamb barbecue don't have to be asked to come back

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Washington politicians take a dim view of Joe Clark as an effective prime minister, and "it's my impression that Canadians feel the same way," author Arthur Schlesinger Jr. told a $50-a-plate Universal Speakers luncheon in Toronto.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip had a busy 32nd wedding anniversary entertaining French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing for lunch at Buckingham Palace, then the Queen received Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in the evening. The 53-year-old monarch also opened a fair in London, while Philip, 58, was to attend a farmers' banquet in Sussex.

A man running a tire repair shop has been sentenced to a seven-month jail term for scattering nails in the street around his shop. Sabar Dolok Pasaribu, 22, told the court in Jakarta he scattered the nails with the hope that passing vehicles would have their tires punctured, and then repaired at his shop.

Although Richard Nixon is otherwise safe from prosecution, a federal judge has ruled the ex-president does not have absolute immunity in a $100-million damage suit for alleged wiretapping and other crimes. U.S. government lawyers argue that Nixon's name should be dismissed from a 1978 suit in which eight former members of the New Left charged they were subjected to burglaries, harassment and illegal surveillance during Nixon's presidency. But U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker said there is no reason why Nixon's rank "distinguishes his case from that of other high-level federal officials" sued in previous actions. Former attorney-general John Mitchell also was unsuccessful in having his name dismissed.

Among his best-known productions are Grapes of Wrath, How Green Was My Valley, All About Eve and Viva Zapata.

Dear Abby:

I am a 32-year-old reasonably successful man — never married, but very much in love with a beautiful young woman. My hangup is that I am accustomed to dating girls who would not even consider kissing a fellow on a first date. This girl I'm in love with admitted that she let every guy she ever dated have his way with her.

She says that all young girls in her part of the country were raised that way, and it wasn't until her family moved to a major city that she learned 'right from wrong.'

So here I am, a man who has always dreamed of marrying a virgin, in love with a girl who can't even remember when or how she lost her virginity. (She 'thinks' she was 12 or 13.)

I would like to convince myself that I can forget her past and marry this ex-tramp and live happily ever after.

What are the odds, Abby? I am desperate for some professional advice.

Gentleman

Dear Gentleman:

As long as you view this girl as an 'ex-tramp,' I would estimate your chances for a happy marriage are nil. The poor girl has already been the victim of an amoral upbringing; spare her the added burden of a 'holier than thou' husband.

Dear Abby:

I feel kind of weird writing to you, but here goes. You see, there is this real cute guy at school who follows me in the hall, pulls my hair and socks me on the arm. He has tried to trip me, grab my jacket and shove me into the lockers. He kicked me on the bus once and hit me in the head with his books.

All the kids say he likes me. So why does he act this way?

Likes Him

Dear Likes:

It's his way of making you notice him.

Dear Abby:

I am 17, and I don't like to brag but I guess you could call me a 'popular' girl. I have a good reputation and don't want to spoil it, but here is my problem:

After a fellow has taken me to a movie or a dance, and somewhere afterwards to eat, I hate to turn him down when he wants to make out.

I never go too far, but I feel sort of cheap afterwards. I guess it's because in a way I am really trying to 'repay' him for what he's spent on me.

How can I turn him down?

Considering

Dear Considering:

It's easy. All a guy is entitled to on a date is the pleasure of your company. And unless you want to lose your hard-earned reputation, don't feel obligated to give him his 'hard-earned' money's worth.

Proper lunch chases chills

With the return of chilly November days, part of the routine to keep well-fueled involves preparation of lunches to be eaten away from home. Here are some hints for the lunchmaker.

Lunch should provide about one third of the day's nutritional and energy requirements.

Include foods from each of the Four Food Groups outlined in Canada's Food Guide: 1. Meat and Alternates, 2. Bread and Cereals, 3. Fruits and Vegetables, 4. Milk and Milk Products.

Pack nutritious muffins or cookies for dessert when foods from the Four Food Groups have been included in the lunch.

Set up a lunch making area in the kitchen with a shelf or drawer to hold the necessities. Include a chopping board, knives, bowls, spoons, waxed paper or plastic wrap, aluminum foil, plastic containers, lunch box of bags and paper napkins.

Prepare and refigerate sandwich fillings, hard-cooked eggs and garnishes the night before. Place desserts in plastic containers and refrigerate. Foods prepared and stored overnight in the refigerator have the added advantage of being well chilled, which reduces the danger of spoilage during the 3 or 4 hours until lunchtime.

The key to packing a safe brown bag lunch is to keep hot foods hot, cold foods cold and everything clean. Hot foods should be kept above 60 deg. C. (140 deg. F.); cold foods should be stored at 4 deg. C. (40 deg. F.) or below.

Use a vacuum bottle to keep foods at the proper temperature until lunchtime. Rinsing the bottle with boiling water before filling it with hot foods keeps the food from cooling off. Soups, stews and chili should be boiling hot when they are poured into the vacuum bottle. Pre-chill the vacuum bottle with cold water before adding cold food or liquid.

Chill as much of the lunch as possible overnight in the refigerator before packing. Frozen sandwiches, frozen yogurt or frozen juice thaw in time for lunch and help keep the rest of the lunch cool until then.

Lunchmakers will find variety in the four Canada Food Guide groups

Canned meat and poultry opened and eaten immediately are great for lunches. Dried of fully cooked meats keep well.

All fresh fruits and vegetables should be scrubbed well before packing in a lunch.

Pack each food separately in wax paper, plastic wrap or plastic containers to prevent mingling of flavors and odors.

Pack heavier foods on the bottom to prevent crushing. If a lunch box or vacuum bottle is used, wash it with soapy water, rinse with boiling water and air it to keep it odor-free.

Pack only easy to eat, non-messy foods in the lunch.

Individual-sized cans of juice of cartons of milk are a handy addition to the lunch.

DAGWOOD SANDWICH

75 mL finely chopped celery
10 mL finely chopped onion
75 mL mayonnaise
8 slices lettuce
12 slices rye bread
4 slices processed cheese
2 medium tomatoes, sliced

In a bowl, mix ham, celery, onion and mayonnaise. Place a slice of lettuce on 4 slices of bread. Spoon ham mixture on top. Cover with another slice of bread. Top with lettuce, cheese and tomato and remaining bread. Cut sandwiches in halves (four sandwiches).

VEGETABLE BEEF SOUP

1 L beef stock
500 mL water
250 mL chopped onion
250 mL chopped celery
250 mL chopped carrots
250 mL chopped tomatoes
375 mL chopped cooked beef
25 mL chopped parsley

Salt and pepper to taste.

Place all ingredients except beerf, parsley and seasonings in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover; reduce heat; simmer 25 min. Add beef; simmer 5 min. longer. Add parsley; season with salt and pepper. Pour into warm vacum bottle (six servings).

Here's a better way to peel garlic

craig claiborne

Not long ago I also stated that the best way to peel garlic was to give the individual clove a smack with the flat side of a heavy kitchen knife or with a flat meat mallet. With this, the peel can be pulled off easily using a paring knife.

Rene Farhi thinks she has a better method:

"The best way to peel garlic is to soak the cloves in water for about half an hour and to start peeling from the larger (not the pointed) end." She adds that soaking onions in water for 30 minutes before peeling "will not let the cook cry."

Moving right along the trivia line, the term "86" is used widely by bartenders and others to indicate that a customer is in his cups and must not be served another drink. Similarly, in restaurants it indicates that the kitchen has run out of one dish or another.

In this column, I recently quoted an authority to the effect that numbers were once used as codes in soda fountains across the land to indicate various beverages and other preparations to be found on menus. Fifty-five, according to my authority, meant root beer and 19 indicated a banana split. Eighty-six signaled, as noted, that one soda spigot or a certain dish was kaput.

Several readers wrote to dispute this notion. Some of the substitute notions seemed implausible, but there was one interpretation that I particularly admired and it came from Cynthia Stoddard.

The term "86," she wrote, derives from the fact "that the Second Avenue El stopped — completely — at 86th Street, so everyone had to get out."

"Bars picked up the conductor's call '86' to throw out drunks."

Patrick Duffy of Reading, Me., states that the term originated in California "by bartenders who derived the expression from the California beverage code — Section 86 — which prohibited serving alcoholic beverages to persons in an intoxicated state." Duffy adds that if he is incorrect, there are a lot of California bartenders in error.

At P.J. Clarke's on 55th Street, Jay M. Cohen of the Scarborough Research Corp. in Scarborough, N.Y., says the explanation is this: "In the early days of this country, when much of the distilled liquor was served 100 proof, a bartender would cut off an offensive or intoxicated customer by '86ing him.' That is, by cutting the proof of the liquor to 86."

Random notes:

I offered my method of cleaning used snail shells recently. It involved boiling and draining the shells.

For what it is worth, this elicited a note from a reader in Haverford, Pa., who recommends adding about one-quarter cup of baking soda to the water and letting the shells soak overnight. She adds that this will clean the shells without scrubbing or boiling.

Nose spray for dieting is ridiculous

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Is it true that a good way to lose weight is to use a lot of nasal spray? A friend of mine is doing it. I wonder if it's safe. Mrs. J.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

This idea has caused a flurry of interest because of a recent report that a number of over-the-counter nose sprays may reduce the appetite.

At the present time, there is no solid substantiation of this idea. The drugs in nasal sprays can sometimes cause the blood vessels to temporarily narrow, and thus make breathing a little easier. Some people have felt that along with better breathing comes some control of insatiable appetite.

This idea is potentially hazardous, for it is well-known that dependency on nasal sprays is insidious. Before long, more and more of the drug is required, and its effectiveness proportionately decreased. The result is a "rebound" phenomenon which ultimately makes it virtually impossible to draw a full breath through the nose without the use of nasal sprays.

Those people who attempt to use this ridiculous form of dieting will only add the problem of nasal congestion to their already established obesity problem.

There is no magic that can replace sensible caloric restriction.

Dear Doctor:

I have just bought the house of a man who died of cancer. Since we moved in, my wife seems to be afraid that this can be contagious in some way. She has an unusual fear about this problem. Perhaps you can enlighten us. Mr. E.W.

Dear Mr. W.:

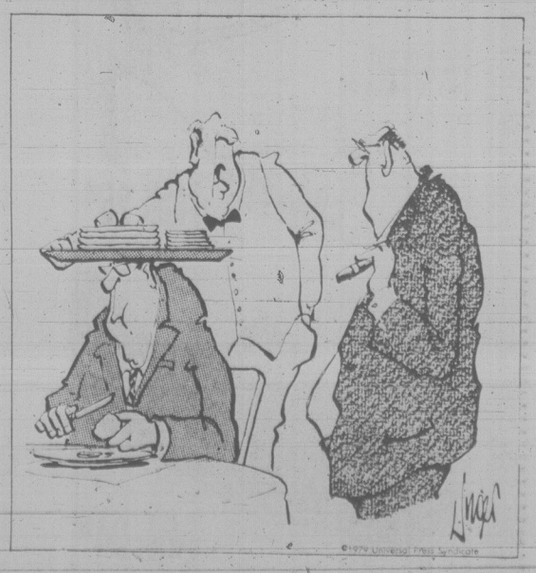

Undoubtedly, you must have been aware that, even before you moved into your new house, your wife was inordinately concerned about cancer. Moving into the house of a person who died of this condition simply magnified an already existing anxiety.

Carcinophobia, or fear of cancer, unfortunately is rampant in our society. Many people spend their lives "dying" of this disease which they probably will never have. Productive lives are seriously affected by uncontrolled fear of cancer.

You must emphasize to your wife that cancer is not infectious and not contagious. Therefore, it cannot be transmitted from one person to another, no matter how close the contact may be.

Nurses, doctors and personnel in hospitals are protected against patients who have infectious diseases. No such precautions are taken when they are caring for patients with cancer. There is absolutely no danger.

Is life a cabaret?

By BARB GAMAREKIAN
New York Times

At a time when the cost of everything from caviar to hamburger has shot sky-high, some Washingtonians have discovered that smashing parties are still to be had for relatively little.

Earlier this week, 250 formally dressed partygoers saw the film Cabaret at the Kennedy Centre and then dined on couscous, fresh salmon and poached pears at the residence of the Moroccan ambassador, Ali Bengelloun, and his wife, Jackie. There, for $35 each, they danced to disco music under crystal chandeliers with Liza Minelli, Andy Warhol, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller and the Crown Prince of Lichtenstein.

It was all organized by Ina Ginsburg, a Washington hostess who has been putting these affairs together for the American Film Institute for seven years. This particular evening was the second of five of a $175 subscription series featuring major motion pictures, each preceded by a cocktail buffet or followed by supper and music.

Miss Minelli, dressed in a black and teal-blue, bugle-beaded jump suit with a decolletage that disappeared into the waistline, arrived directly from the opera house at the Kennedy Center following the opening performance of her six-day concert appearance. Sen. David Pryor was slightly dazed to find himself sitting next to her. "I really shouldn't be sitting here," he protested as photographers snapped away. "Get Pressler," he said, referring to Larry Pressler, the Republican senator from South Dakota who has announced for the presidency, "he's the presidential candidate — he should be sitting here."

Andy Warhol, who was in town promoting his book "Exposures," stood out in black and white relief against the technicolor of the dance floor, a black tie topping his blue jeans. "Washington parties are the best," he said.

Earlier, Warhol said, he had escorted Dr. and Mrs. Zbigniew Brzezinski backstage to meet Miss Minelli.

Included in Warhol's entourage were Bob Colacello, editor of Interview magazine; Elizinha Goncalves, the former wife of a former Brazilian ambassador, who was weighed down with rubies and diamonds, and Thomas Ammann, an art dealer from Zurich.

"It appeared that all the stray New Yorkers who happened to be in town ended up at the Moroccan Embassy.

"I'm president of Actors Equity and in town for the AFL-CIO meetings — that's why I'm so overdressed," said Theodore Bikel, whose chocolate trousers were topped with a ginger-colored jacket.

Other guests included former Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts and his wife, Ann; Sen. Jim Sasser, D.-Tenn., and his wife, Mary; Sen. Claiborne Pell, D.-R.I.; Evan and Kit Dobelle, and the director of the American Film Institute, George Stevens, and his wife, Liz.

The party was "just for friendship, not politics," said the host, Ambassador Bengelloun, who said he was prepared to feed 300.

The film party series is so popular that three-quarters of the subscribers are repeaters each year, and more than $25 million has been raised for the support of the institute's training programs for young film makers and for its archival work, Stevens said.

"The embassies find it a legitimate way to entertain because many of the films that we show are international films and it gives exposure to their film industry," Mrs. Ginsburg said. Later this year the Canadian and Spanish Embassies will be giving parties following the American premieres of new Canadian and Spanish films.

When "Murder on the Orient Express" was previewed a few years ago, Lauren Bacall was the visiting star and then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey attended. The evening was topped with cocktails and a buffet supper in the institute's library.

On another occasion "Casablanca" was the attraction, Ingrid Bergman the guest of honor, and the ambassador of Sweden and Countess Wachmeister entertained at the Swedish Embassy after the film showing.

Cheese and olive casserole can sit by until you're ready to eat

Mexican food is more than tamales and tacos

Ask five Canadians what Mexican food means to them and you'll probably get tacos, enchiladas, tamales, frijoles and guacamole. Beyond that, they are in unfamiliar territory.

Few people realize that Mexican cuisine is one of the oldest and most intricate cuisines in the world. More than 6,000 years ago Mexican cooks were preparing deliciously complicated meals. No less than 27 courses appeared at the table during elaborate feasts.

Food and religion were synonymous in ancient Mexico. People considered food a gift from the Gods and eating it an act of homage.

Fresh fish, seafood, turkey, deer and other game were abundant in old Mexico. It is said that Montezuma had fresh fish and seafood brought to him every day from the Gulf of Mexico by relays of runners.

Vegetables were, and still are, a mainstay of Mexican cuisine. Corn, beans, and chilis appear in practically every recipe and in some form at every meal. Since the beginning chilis have been used in main dishes, sauces and even desserts. More than 90 varieties flourish in Mexican soil.

In addition to chilis, pungent herbs and spices and delicate condiments have become hallmarks of true Mexican cookery. Both ancient and present-day Mexican cooks use them to flavour all kinds of foods.

Modern Mexican cuisine has some of its roots in the Spanish conquest. The Conquistadores introduced the Mexican people to cattle and livestock. In return they received an array of produce surprises which they promptly shipped back to Europe. Among these were tomatoes, avocados, eggplant, peanuts, beans, vanilla, chocolate, and, of course, chilis.

CHILI CON CARNE
Makes 6 servings

1 pound medium ground beef
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
1 package chili seasoning mix
½ cup water
1 can (19-ounce) kidney or pinto beans
1 can (19-ounce) tomatoes

Brown ground beef in skillet until crumbly. Add seasoned salt and chili seasoning mix. Stir thoroughly. Add water, kidney or pinto beans and tomatoes. Mix thoroughly. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer uncovered 10 minutes.

CHEESE AND OLIVE CASSEROLE
Makes 6 servings

1 package Spanish rice seasoning mix
3 cups water
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 cup uncooked rice
½ cup sliced ripe olives, drained
1⅓ cup cubed cheddar cheese

Combine Spanish rice seasoning mix, water and salad oil. Mix thoroughly. Bring to a boil. Stir in rice. Cover and simmer 25 minutes. Add sliced olives and cubed cheese. Mix lightly. Place in greased 1½ quart casserole. Bake in 350° oven 15 minutes.

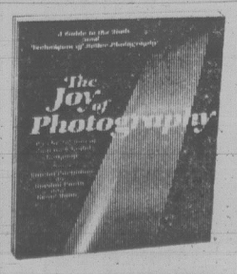

TIJUANA TORTE
Makes 6 servings

This new idea, which is a take-off on a torte, is easy to make and fun to serve. Tortillas are stacked and layered with a spicy tomato-meat filling and grated cheddar cheese . . . then baked until cheese is bubbly. Serve a crisp green salad of zucchini and romaine to compliment this savory dish.

1 pound medium ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
1 can (14 ounce) stewed tomatoes
1 can (7½ ounce) tomato sauce
1 can (4 ounce) chopped green chiles (optional)
1 package Taco seasoning mix
12 corn tortillas
1 pound cheddar cheese, grated

Brown ground beef and onion in skillet. Add stewed tomatoes, tomato sauce, green chiles and taco seasoning mix. Combine thoroughly and simmer 10 to 15 minutes. Place about ¼ cup meat mixture in the bottom of a 9x13-inch baking dish. Place 2 tortillas side by side on the meat mixture. Top each tortilla with some meat mixture and grated cheese. Repeat until each stack contains 6 tortillas layered with meat and cheese. Bake in 350°F oven 20 to 25 minutes or until cheese is bubbly. Cut each torte (stack) into quarters with sharp knife before serving.

Clam fritter tasty critter this month

Looking for something new and different for hors d'oeuvres, appetizer, or dinner? Well, it's national Fish & Seafood Month in Canada and here's a recipe you must try. Clam Fritters can be made in various sizes. Little ones for hors d'oeuvres, medium size as the appetizer, and generous size for dinner. The very easy, yet tasty, Devil Sauce that accompanies them can be served as a dip or passed as gravy.

Should you feel hesitant to serve them because some people may not like clams — don't worry. The perfectly seasoned rice and clam mixture is deceiving. The clam flavor is there, but it's not overpowering. In fact, the flavor is most pleasing and will, in turn, satisfy both clam lovers and those who claim otherwise!

Notice the generous number of fritters that you can make from just two little cans of minced clams. Economy isn't the only thing to think about when preparing meals, but it certainly is becoming more important these days. The secret in meal-stretching here is the rice. At just three cents per half cup serving, it can turn many expensive foods into attractive and full course meals for the whole family.

CLAM FRITTERS

1 cup all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon onion powder
2 eggs, separated
¼ cup milk
2 cans (6½ oz. each) minced clams (drain; reserve liquid)
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
3 cups cooked rice
¼ cup minced green pepper
Vegetable Oil
Devil Sauce*

Sift together dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks, milk, ½ cup clam liquid and 1 tablespoon vegetable oil together until blended. Add to the dry ingredients and beat until smooth. Stir in drained clams, rice, and green pepper. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter. Pour oil to a depth of about 4 inches into a deep saucepan; heat to 350°F on a deep-fat thermometer. Spoon heaping tablespoons of rice-clam mixture into hot fat and fry about 5 minutes, allowing about 2½ minutes on each side. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve with Devil Sauce. Makes about 24 fritters.

Note: For hors d'oeuveres or appetizers, decrease size and cooking time.

DEVIL SAUCE

Heat 1 can (10¾-oz.) condensed tomato soup, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, ¼-cup clam liquid and a dash of red pepper.

Fritter served up with Devil Sauce

Rack saves time

Successful cooks have the ability to prepare themselves by making all their ingredients accessible, by ordering their time, and by organizing their kitchen so that crucial minutes are not wasted in search of necessary equipment.

An important organizational aid is a knife holder of some kind. Most people keep their knives in a kitchen drawer, where they bang together and nick one another and where they frequently reside in a helter-skelter mess. The simplest remedies for that chaos are in the form of racks or magnetic bars. A wooden knife rack a foot or a foot and a half long and about two inches thick has a slot that runs its length and you slide knives into it.

A knife bar is a similar length of wood with a magnet embedded in it to hold the knives secure. Both devices are relatively inexpensive ($10, more or less, depending on the size and materials used), but both have one notable flaw — they have to be positioned along the side of a cabinet, counter or a wall where no one, especially a child, can brush against the blades. The safest place to put the rack or bar may not be the most convenient.

If you have the counter space, a better way to organize knives is provided by one of the many knife blocks on the market. These are blocks of wood with several deep slots, each designed to hold a single knife. They come in a variety of materials, sizes and shapes. Most are vertical blocks of wood, but some sit on a base that allows the knife handles to slant toward you.

Some are hollow or made of pressed wood and are too light to suit me; they might slide around on the counter if a knife is removed vigorously.

Just for knaves. . .

Lemon cheese, also known as lemon curd, goes into tiny tarts famous in England.

LEMON CURD TARTS

Pastry for 2 (9-inch) crusts.
6 eggs
2 cups sugar
1-4 cup lemon juice
1-4 cup butter or margarine
Lemon slices.

Roll out pastry, cut in appropriate sizes and shape to fit tiny tart pans. Bake at 450 degrees 5 minutes. Let cool, then remove from pans.

Beat together eggs and sugar in top of double boiler. Stir in lemon juice and butter. Cook over hot, not boiling, water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Set pan in cold water. Cool completely. Spoon filling into tart shells and garnish each with 1-4 slice of lemon. Makes about 2 dozen tarts.

MOM'S BAKED APPLES

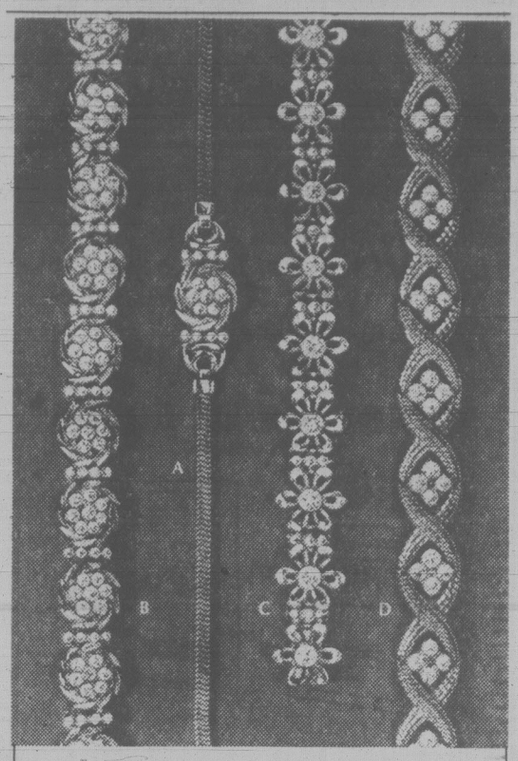

Wash and core apples and place in baking dish. Cut skins at top of apple in an "X" so skins won't pop. Fill cavities with brown sugar, dab of butter and dash of cinnamon. Fill baking dish 1-4 inch deep with water and bake at 375 degrees 45 to 50 minutes until tender. Serve with whipping cream poured over apples.

Yule cake packed with holiday energy

hilda beastall

By HILDA BEASTALL

Strenuous exercise during winter in Canada usually consists of outdoor activities, the ideal way to enjoy whatever the elements may bring.

Before setting out on a trail walk, the city dweller needs to build up endurance by increasing distances first in city and nearby areas, and by consistent use of nutritiously varied meals.

No one kind of food is advised by experts in outdoor activities but each food should contain more than minimal levels of nutrients.

During the time of high energy use, homemade snack foods at frequent intervals are preferred to larger meals at longer intervals, according to a recent article containing commonsense rules issued by the Canadian Cross-Country Ski Association.

Included in the "snacks" were such favorite foods as peanut butter on wholewheat sandwiches, a mixture of dried fruits, sunflower seeds, nuts and raisins, homemade granola bars, carrot cake, and of all things — Christmas Cake! This last (without icing) is, in its best form, a combination of most of the above items.

The article inspired this second Christmas Cake recipe, which is more suitable for this high energy purpose than my previous one of two weeks ago. And it slices into small pieces to be wrapped individually for trail hiking and other outdoor jaunts.

Use your metric measure cup and set of spoons to follow recipe easily without need for converting.

FRUIT CAKE

250 ml dried apricot, peach and prune mixture
150 ml currants
250 ml cut up dates
100 ml orange and lemon juice mixed
125 ml ground sunflower seeds
125 ml soft margarine
50 ml brown sugar
3 small eggs, separated
125 ml wholewheat flour
125 ml soy flour
2 ml salt

Overnight (or early morning) cut dried fruits except currants into small dice, put into large bowl. Cover with mixed orange and lemon juice containing some pulp, and mix to cover all pieces of fruit.

Let stand overnight or several hours.

In large mixing bowl, cream margarine, add sugar, beaten egg yolks, soaked fruit and sunflower seeds. Mix well.

Measure into sifter the two flours and salt. Sift into fruit mixture. Stir well.

Beat egg whites until stiff; fold into fruit-flour mix.

Spoon into well greased 6-inch round cake pan, or loaf pan of comparable size.

Bake in centre of warm to moderate oven 165 degree C. to 180 degree C. for about 1½ hours. Cover loosely with foil for latter part if necessary to prevent further browning. Test with clean dry knife for doneness.

Turn out and cool on wire rack; cool thoroughly before storing.

A cookie type square with chocolate flavor is a useful trail snack when made with carob chips in place of cocoa. Carob (known as St. John's-Bread in warm countries where it was used for food from Biblical time) is a pleasant alternative to cocoa or chocolate, having a lighter flavor. Carob Chips are small "nibs" which basically keep their shape when cooked in the few minutes required for these Chocolate Flavored Squares.

Carob powder and carob chips are both available on open shelves in some local grocery departments.

Again use metric cup and spoon measures.

CHOCOLATE FLAVORED SQUARES

100 ml soft margarine
45 ml brown sugar (level measure)
1 small egg
75 ml carob chips
175 ml wholewheat flour
45 ml skim milk powder
5 ml baking powder (scant)
1 ml salt
125 ml ground sunflower seeds or unsalted peanuts

Cream soft margarine in bowl with sugar and egg. Add carob chips.

Measure flour, milk powder, salt and baking powder into sifter. Blend into creamed mixture. Stir in sunflower seeds or peanuts.

Spoon into greased 8 x 8-inch baking pan. Bake in warm oven 165 degree C. for about 25 minutes. Do not scorch.

Cool slightly; cut into about 24 squares.

The next trail cookie is made with green tomatoes flavored with lemon juice.

GREEN TOMATO-WHEAT GERM COOKIES

125 ml soft margarine
50 ml brown sugar
2 small eggs
4 ml grated lemon rind
250 ml wholewheat flour
250 ml unbleached flour
5 ml baking powder
2 ml salt
250 ml chopped green tomatoes juice of ½ lemon
200 ml wheat germ

Cream margarine and sugar together. Add eggs and lemon rind, beating with large wooden spoon until light.

Measure flours, baking powder and salt into sifter; sift into egg mixture. Stir to mix. Add chopped green tomatoes with lemon juice.

Add 125 ml wheat germ to make stiff dough. Refrigerate 2 hours (can be longer if more convenient).

Shape pieces of dough into 1-inch diameter balls, rolling each in remaining wheat germ; add a little more wholewheat flour to stiffen if needed.

Place on greased cookie tray; flatten with fork.

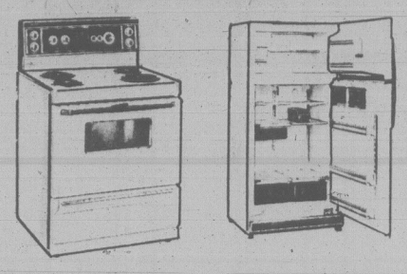

Bake in centre of fairly hot oven 200 degree C. until lightly tinged on edges. This may be about 10 minutes according to oven. Remove from tray at once to cool.

Makes 36 cookies, crisp yet chewy.

Making energy snacks at home ensures they are not overloaded with refined sugar, which has a use in emergency situations but not in daily living even on trail hikes or skiing. Fruit and grain sugars contained in the snack foods listed are preferred for keeping energy at a more constant level. Exceptions are for folks on medically restricted diets, who must be guided by their physicians. The same snacks are suitable for children and adults who are constantly active yet are not big eaters.

Homemade snack foods are less expensive, because the ingredients are under the homemaker's control. Make them good.

Daily interest is only part of what we do.

With the introduction of the Daily Interest Savings Account, The Permanent now can provide a wide range of money services.

The Daily Interest Savings Account
Your money earns interest each and every day, from the date of deposit to the date of withdrawal and is credited to your account semi-annually. It's calculated on your closing daily balance.
No minimum balance is required.
A statement is issued for every period when a transaction has taken place.

The Monthly Interest Savings Account
This type of account pays interest on your minimum monthly balance, and is credited to your account semi-annually.
You can't write cheques on either savings account, but you can always withdraw money in person, or by letter.

The Statement Chequing Account
Because this account pays no interest, you only need a balance of $200, in order to enjoy free chequing privileges. If transactions have occurred during a statement period, all your transactions are itemized and the paid cheques and withdrawal slips are returned to you. With this type of account, you also receive free, fully personalized cheques.

The Permaservice Plan
Just $2.00 monthly provides a Statement Chequing Account on which there is no charge for any cheques or withdrawals and no minimum balance required. You'll also receive a personalized I.D. card which allows you to pay certain utility bills (where permitted), purchase The Permanent's Canadian money orders and travellers cheques in Canadian and U.S. funds without any service charge.

Veal stew

(4 to 6 servings)
2 pounds stew veal (1 to 1 1-2 inch cubes)
3 large carrots, scraped and cut into 1-inch pieces
2 medium onions, chopped very fine
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons water
3-4 pound mushrooms, sliced thin
1-2 teaspoon dried tarragon
2 egg yolks
1-2 cup heavy cream or sour cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice

In a 3-to-5 quart casserole combine the veal, carrots and onions. Add enough water to just cover. Season with salt and cayenne and bring to a simmer. Partially cover and simmer gently for 45 minutes to 1 1-2 hours or until meat is almost tender. (Timing depends on quality of meat.)

In a cup, dissolve the flour in 2 tablespoons cold water then stir into the veal stew. Stir until liquid thickens slightly. Add the mushrooms and tarragon and simmer uncovered for another 15 minutes.

In a small cup or bowl, beat together the egg yolks and cream. Add to the stew and, stirring constantly, heat through without boiling. Stir in lemon juice. Serve in bowls with boiled new potatoes.

Wok cooking fast and fun

The time consuming part of Oriental cooking is the initial step of preparing food for the wok — the slicing and shredding of innumerable vegetables, meat, or fish into paper-thin strips.

First, a word on woks. Be sure you have the right type. If you have a gas stove, you can use the traditional shaped wok with a sloping bottom, designed to rest in its own metal collar. If you have an electric stove, you need a flat-bottomed wok which sits directly on the electric burner.

Sir fry beef and tomatoes can be prepared in a jiffy. For convenience and fresh flavor

Stir fry beef and tomatoes can be prepared in a jiffy. For convenience and fresh flavor the year round, use canned whole peeled tomatoes. Quarter the tomatoes and set aside; mix the juice with soy sauce and cornstarch for an authentic Japanese flavor. Ingredients are added to the wok (or skillet) a few at a time and stirred constantly. Total cooking time is about five minutes!

Vegetable tempura is another Japanese dish sure to please every palate. Sift dry ingredients as directed. Mix one egg with one cup of liquefied instant nonfat dry milk for extra protein richness. Stir into dry ingredients until smooth.

This batter needs to be refrigerated for at least one hour for best consistency and coating action. Make the batter in the morning and refrigerate all day, if this fits your schedule better. Just before dinner, dip selected raw vegetables into the refrigerated batter mixture and deep-fry in a wok or electric skillet at exactly 375 deg. for about one minute.

The correct cooking temperature is very critical for perfect tempura.

VEGETABLE TEMPURA
(Makes about 6 cups.)

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 slightly beaten egg
1 cup milk
1½ to 2 pounds prepared raw vegetables*
4 cups oil.

Sift flour, salt, and baking soda in medium bowl. Combine egg and liquid instant milk; stir into dry ingrdients until smooth. Refrigerate at least 1 hour. Lightly coat fresh vegetables in batter, allow excess batter to drip from vegetables. Fry in hot oil (375 deg. F) in wok or electric skillet 1 minute or until golden brown and crisp. Drain on paper towels and serve with your favorite hot mustard or soy sauce.

*Prepared raw vegetables: broccoli and cauliflower flowerettes, carrot strips, bell pepper rings, green onions, mushrooms, sweet potatoe strips, diagonal sliced celery, and eggplant cubes.

STIR FRY BEEF AND TOMATOES
(Makes about 4 cups.)

1¾ cups (14½-ounce can) whole peeled tomatoes and juice
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 pound round steak
2 tablespoons oil
1 large crushed garlic clove
1 cup (1 medium) sliced onion
1 cup (¼ pound) sliced mushrooms
1 cup (1 medium) green pepper strips
1 beef bouillon cube
Hot cooked rice.

Drain tomatoes; reserve juice. Cut tomatoes into quarters. Combine reserved juice, soy sauce, and cornstarch; mix thoroughly. Cut steak into thin strips. Heat oil in wok or large skillet over high heat. Stir fry meat and garlic 1 to 2 minutes; push to one side. Add onion and mushrooms; stir fry 2 minutes. Add green pepper and bouillon cube, crushing cube. Stir in soy sauce mixture and reserved tomatoes. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Reduce heat; cook 1 minute. Serve over hot cooked rice, if desired.

Kitchen tradition has roots

By MIKE McGRADY

A woman known to be a first-rate cook had one idiosyncracy — she always removed the legs from the chickens before cooking them. Finally, one of her dinner guests asked what happened to the drumsticks. The woman explained that this was the proper way to cook a chicken, the only way to cook a chicken. It was, in fact, the way her dear mother had always cooked chickens and her mother was the best cook in the entire country. The guest was still curious about this and she telephoned the woman's mother and asked her what culinary benefits came your way when you cooked legless chickens. The old woman thought for a moment and said, "Oh, yes, the reason I cut the legs off was that I didn't have a pot big enough for the whole chicken."

In such a way are culinary traditions established. And that's the danger of slavishly following patterns: Whole generations miss out on drumsticks.

The truth is that there is more than one way to roast a bird. Tonight's seasoning, for example, is tarragon, but it could as easily be rosemary or marjoram, thyme or paprika. Different tastes, but the same overall result.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, Dijon mustard, lemon, garlic, wine vinegar, olive oil, vegetable oil, eggs, tarragon (either fresh or dried), butter, creme de menthe.

The Shopping List: Three pounds of new potatoes; two four-pound roasting chickens; one-half pound bacon; one head lettuce; one bunch watercress; two large lemons; one small container sour cream; vanilla ice cream.

4:30 P.M.: Preheat the oven to 450 degrees. Rub the juice of a lemon over the two chickens, both inside and out. Inside the roasting chickens you are apt to find a small packet of spare parts (neck, gizzard, liver and so forth). Take this out and set it aside for another day. But leave the legs on.

Now take a healthy pinch of tarragon and scatter it within the body cavity of each chicken. Sprinkle another pinch over the outside of the birds. Then add a scattering of salt and pepper. Place the two chickens on a metal rack in a shallow baking pan; the metal rack keeps the birds from getting soggy. Lay the strips of bacon over the chickens, put them into the preheated oven, and lower the temperature to 350 degrees.

5 P.M.: Boil the unpeeled new potatoes in a pot of water for about 10 minutes. Remove them from the heat and allow them to cool off before going back to them. Spoon some of the drippings over the roasting chickens. The bacon will be cooked on one side; turn over the strips but leave them on the birds and return roasting pan to oven.

5:15 P.M.: Rinse the greens — the lettuce, the watercress and any other salad ingredients you care to add — and pat them dry with paper towels.

Now you're ready to make the Perfect French Dressing. You can use either a blender or a jar with a tight cap.

Start with a teaspoon of salt and a healthy dose of black pepper, freshly ground if possible. Add two teaspoons of Dijon mustard. The juice of a large lemon. Four cloves of finely chopped garlic. A quarter of a cup of good wine vinegar. A quarter of a cup of olive oil. A cup of vegetable oil. Two eggs that have been beaten. And, finally, the sour cream. Mix. This will be enough for a few salads, and it will keep nicely in the refrigerator.

5:30 P.M.: Back to the chickens. Remove the bacon slices and drain them on paper towels. Break the cooked bacon into small pieces and add them to the salad greens. Put the chickens back in the oven without the bacon and every 15 minutes or so, baste them with drippings from the bottom of the pan.

5:45 P.M.: The new potatoes should be sufficiently cool now so that the skins will peel away easily. Place the peeled potatoes in the oven with the chickens, allowing the spuds to complete their cooking in the same juices that you use for basting. When you baste the birds, turn the potatoes over so that they brown evenly on all sides.

6:20 P.M.: Test the chickens for doneness. The easiest way to do this is to wiggle one of the legs — if it moves easily in its hip socket, it is well done. A fork should easily pierce the potatoes. And now is the proper time to add the dressing to the salad, tossing the greens to make sure they're all coated. The ice cream will be served later with a dash of creme de menthe.

And now, as you prepare to carve the chickens, you can take requests for drumsticks. There should be precisely four of them. Any more or any less and you haven't been paying attention.

Diet soap only $4.95

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — Two young entrepeneurs have introduced a product for weight-watching washers. It's called Diet Soap and sells for $4.95.

The calorie-cutting benefits of Diet Soap are extolled in the Fat-Chance Diet, which advises users to spend one mealtime a day in the shower instead of at the table.

Robert Dickinson, 26, and Kurt Kinnamon, 25, got the idea for Diet Soap while peddling a line of diet and soap goods in Delaware.

"A woman misheard and thought we said diet soap," said Kinnamon. "We liked the name and for six months and looked for a product to fit it."

Wilderness course given

HAMILTON (CP) — A minor illness or injury can have major consequences if it occurs far from medical facilities. Mohawk College, Hamilton, and Toronto's Humber College are offering a joint wilderness first-aid course. The course is aimed at hunters and camp leaders.

Fresh sausage meat is the hearty key to rich and cheesy Pizza Souffle

Pizza dish for brunch

Brighten the morning or your next brunch with a zesty flavored souffle that can be made ahead. Serve with peach halves and compliment with a glass of chilled orange juice served elegantly from a punch bowl.

Since this pizza flavored souffle also contains sausage, it serves also as a light supper entree.

PIZZA SOUFFLE

1 pound fresh sausage, cooked and casing removed, if necessary
8 slices white bread
½ pound sharp cheddar cheese, grated
½ pound Mozzarella cheese, grated
2 teaspoons oregano
2 teaspoons fennel
6 eggs
3½ cups milk

If using skim milk, reduce to 3 cups

Place Italian sausage in a skillet, cover with scalding water and simmer. Meanwhile, trim crusts of bread and cut into cubes. Trimming crusts from bread is not necessary, but it will give souffle a lighter texture.

Generously butter a 9x13-inch casserole and spread bread cubes in bottom. After sausages have simmer, drain thoroughly and slice in one-fourth inch slices. Arrange on top of bread cubes, then cover with grated mozzarella cheese and cheddar cheese, and sprinkle with oregano and fennel. In blender or mixer combine eggs, milk, and pour over casserole. Cover, and place in refrigerator overnight. Bake in a 300°F oven for 1½ hours. It might take a little longer, if the casserole has just been removed from the refrigerator. Serves 8-10.

Home jells good giving

A delicious yule gift solution is clear, shimmering jelly. Here are two recipes for these treats that can be fixed in less than an hour. What's more, Orange Sauterne Jelly and Grapefruit Wine Jelly are appropriately festive yet, inexpensive to make.

Jelly is among the quickest of all home canned foods to prepare. Combine the ingredients, heat briefly and pour into jars — no processing is needed. Simply invert the closed jars a few seconds after filling and cool upright to seal.

GRAPEFRUIT WINE JELLY

1 cup freshly squeezed, strained grapefruit juice
1 cup dry sauterne
3½ cups sugar
1 pouch liquid pectin

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions. Jars should be covered with water and boiled 10 to 15 minutes to sterilize.

Combine grapefruit juice, wine and sugar in a small, heavy saucepan. Stir over very low heat until well blended. Cook until sugar is dissolved, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in pectin. Skim off any foam.

Immediately but carefully pour into hot sterilized jars, leaving ⅛ inch head space. Wipe jar rim clean, place lid on and screw band down evenly and firmly. Repeat for each jar. Invert jar for a few seconds and stand upright to cool. Yield: about five eight ounce jars.

ORANGE SAUTERNE JELLY

1½ cups dry sauterne
½ cups fresh orange juice
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon finely grated orange peel
½ package powdered pectin (about 3 tablespoons)
4 cups mild honey

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions. Jars should be covered with water and boiled 10 to 15 minutes to sterilize.

In a large saucepan combine sauterne, citrus juices grated peel and pectin. Place over high heat and bring to a full, rolling boil. Immediately stir in honey. Return to a rolling boil. Boil hard for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and skim off foam.

Immediately but carefully pour into a hot, sterilized jelly jars, leaving ⅛ inch head space. Wipe jar rim clean, place lid on an screw band down evenly and firmly. Repeat for each jar. Invert jar for a few seconds; then stand upright to cool. Yield: about six eight-ounce jars.

The Beaujolais is fine in 1979

PARIS (Reuter) — "Life is beautiful. Everything's all right. This year's Beaujolais is good."

This opinion of the 1979 new Beaujolais was voiced by a grey-suited businessman as he left a well-known Paris cafe Thursday.

Dismissed by many experts as the fruit of a snobbish — and recent — fad, Beaujolais nouveau is allowed to leave the town of Macon, centre of the Beaujolais region, only after midnight Nov. 15 each year.

Release of the wine starts a furious race all over Europe, with prizes offered for the first to bring it to some cities. Specially chartered jumbo jets carry it to North America.

Bernard Peret, regularly voted one of the top Paris wine merchants, said only: "It's a fine wine. It's well balanced."

Last year, Peret was more voluble, saying that the 1978 wine was "super — when I first tasted it, I knew I was going to enjoy myself."

HOT STUFF!
Well — not quite. We had a burglary and the police caught the babies with the goodies! It all works well but some have suffered scratches and bumps. We're selling it all near or below cost and the insurance covers the rest. Don't wait, the savings are incredible but all are one of a kind.

RCMP prefer not to say why

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP has asked the Federal Court of Canada to allow the force to keep secret its reasons for refusing to give a security clearance to a 23-year-old federal fisheries clerk.

Ronda Lee placed first in a civil service competition for a job as a clerk with the RCMP, and was given the job subject to a routine security check.

When she failed the check, the job was supposed to go to the woman who placed second in the competition.

Ms. Lee appealed to the Public Service Commission which ruled the job could not be given to anyone else because there was some doubt Ms. Lee was not properly eliminated from the competition.

The Attorney-General of Canada, on behalf of the RCMP, requested Tuesday that the Federal Court overturn the appeal board's decision and decide whether the police have the right to refuse to grant a job applicant security clearance without stating a reason.

The Public Service Alliance of Canada said it is not opposed to the security checks, but it doesn't feel the government has the right to withhold the results of such investigations.

Union spokesman Bev Sherman said there are two reasons the force might deny a person security clearance — a flaw in their moral character or the police feel their relationships with family or friends would leave them vulnerable to pressure and therefore a security risk.

Ms. Lee refused to discuss the case.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Two aides for 208 during fatal plunge

Only two nurses' aides were on duty to care for 208 patients when 90-year-old John Pascoe plunged to his death from a third-floor window of the James Bay Lodge on Nov. 7, an inquest was told Tuesday night.

Pascoe had been admitted to the lodge at 336 Simcoe two days before his death.

Aides Julie Gravells and Giselle Poliseno told the inquest they had not been told Pascoe suffered mental confusion, and Gravells said she wasn't sure if her superiors had told her he was also blind.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre excused Gravells from the witness stand when he learned she had taken 2½ sleeping pills before the inquest began.

St. Jorre suggested the pills were probably affecting Gravells' testimony because she said some things that conflicted with a statement she gave police two days after Pascoe's death.

Poliseno was unable to tell the inquest why Pascoe hadn't been placed on the second floor of the lodge, the usual practice with residents who are confused.

Penelope Armstrong, director of nursing at the lodge, answering the lawyer for the Pascoe estate, William Hitch, said the nurses' aides should probably have been informed of Pascoe's problems.

Although Pascoe didn't appear confused when she interviewed him, Armstrong testified, that fact was noted on his medical card.

Poliseno later testified she was unaware of one assessment data report had contained the fact that side rails were needed on Pascoe's bed.

On the night Pascoe died, only the two aides, a night watchman and a supervising charge nurse were on duty. Poliseno said the usual staff on hand would have numbered five or six aides, or two to a floor.

Asked how often staff shortages occurred, she said it didn't happen too often, only when someone phoned in sick but she was unable say exactly how often this occurs.

Armstrong, when asked if anything could have been done to prevent the death of Pascoe and an 88-year-old woman who also fell to her death from a third-floor window of the lodge Monday, said: "I really can't think of anything we could have done that would have been different."

She said the lodge was limiting the width that windows at the lodge can be opened to six inches.

Coroner St. Jorre told the six-man jury that all local lodges for the elderly are facing unexpected staff shortages.

Fisherman's SOS launches search

A search was continuing today for Qualicum fisherman John William Morriss who abandoned his 10-metre fishboat Val Salmo northwest of Lasqueti Island Tuesday.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre in CFB Esquimalt said Morris made a distress call about 5 p.m. before taking to his dinghy.

The Val Salmo was found several hours later. The seas were described as moderate with 1.5-metre waves.

A Buffalo fixed-wing aircraft and Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox were searching the area today, as well as two fishing vessels.

Outdoors a guide for potted mums

During the past four weeks or so potted chrysanthemums have been a popular gift. This is appropriate enough, for these lovely plants are long-lasting, especially while homes are not overheated as happens during winter.

The plants thrive normally outdoors in the shortening days of fall, enjoying sunshine and the cooler temperatures that come with the season.

Perhaps we would do well to take these outdoor conditions as guidelines for keeping the potted chrysanthemums fresh and colorful when in our homes. Too often the foliage goes first, leaving the flowers rather isolated on bare stems.

Most of us know, from attending flower shows and browsing through 'mum lists, that several hundreds of varieties are grown locally in outdoor gardens; but some of us are not aware that most varieties used in florists' greenhouses for retailing as pot plants are not the same varieties.

The chrysanthemum is not a plant that increases in size year after year in the garden as do most of our perennials. Certainly the same plant can be perpetuated indefinitely, but it is by means of cuttings taken from the over wintered plant as growth begins in spring. To be successful, with strong stems and well sized and well shaped flowers, this procedure is necessary because of the increasingly hard woody stems which develop on old plants.

The two or three-inch cuttings in spring are taken and rooted, then grown throughout summer in a humus-filled soil in a sunny garden spot. After appropriate pinching and disbudding according to the type, flowers appear at the time the variety normally blooms outdoors.

Schedules for greenhouse raising of the same plants is a much more complicated affair since the program is wholly an artifically produced environment simulating summer and fall but in a limited space of time and often at a different calendar season.

Raised benches where the plants are grown receive special fertilizer programming for quick growth. The plants are pinched to produce low growth suitable for pots, then given an artifically short day of sunlight by means of lights followed by an enclosure of black cloth to ensure unbroken long hours of darkness. This latter procedure is similar to that provided for hastening poinsettias.

Does this make you appreciate your gift plant more? In brief, you can keep it fresh by giving it cool by day and dark at night.

Give it good light but not direct sun during the day. For the night put it into either an unheated porch or into an unheated room. Failing these suitable spots, a place on the floor near an outside door will be cooler than on a table.

Give an occasional good watering, enough to soak through into the saucer. Leave it in the saucer to soak back into the soil as needed in about 30 minutes. Empty remaining water from saucer and give no more for three or four days, or until the soil is becoming dry. The lighter weight of the pot is a good guide.

The flowers should last five to six weeks in good color; the leaves should be still fresh and green.

When the flowers fade, cut them of. Keep the foliage good by reduced watering, and then as they too fade, reduce watering again until you cut down the stems to about three inches.

Then put the pot aside where it will not freeze but will be just kept alive until a mild spell in early spring when it can, if you like, be planted outdoors.

You have an outline of growing requirements above, if you wish to try your luck at growing the chrysanthemum again, outdoors, just to see how it develops.

Task force tackles tourism merger

By AL FORREST

A task force will be established immediately to try to merge all Victoria organizations dealing with conventions and tourists, it was announced Tuesday.

The task force will also report on how the new organization should be financed.

The announcement was made at the conclusion of a day-long seminar on tourism sponsored jointly by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors Information Centre.

VIC president Ed Higgin said the organization, if approved by the community, should include the management of the proposed new convention centre along with his organization and the tourist committee of the chamber.

The task force would consider whether all downtown business groups should also join, to form one massive organization dealing with the tourist industry.

The study will be spearheaded by the chamber with the first discussion being held at a brainstorming weekend session in Parksville starting Nov. 30.

"I hope the task force will have a report ready by the end of the year," Higgin said.

Chamber president Mel Cooper said the proposal will be given high priority and the study will begin as soon as possible.

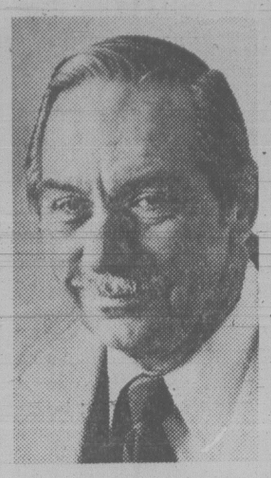

The task force will be named within a few days, he said.

The announcement concluded the first tourism seminar in Victoria.

Higgin and Cooper had hoped the meeting would give some direction to the task force on financing but some businessmen said it would be premature to discuss financing without knowing the scope or budget of the new organization.

COOPER

HIGGIN
. . .report by year-end

Higgin proposed an increase in the four-per-cent business tax.

A one-per-cent increase, earmarked for tourist promotion, would add $300,000 from Victoria City and $75,000 from Saanich. Oak Bay and Esquimalt do not have equivalent business taxes but they could make equivalent grants to complete the financing formula.

In addition to an increased business tax, Higgin said, there should be some kind of membership fee and various promotions, such as the successful trade dollar sale.

All proposals will be assessed by the task force.

On the question of budget, Higgin said most private companies spend between one and three per cent of revenues on advertising.

Because the Victoria area gets about $200 million a year from tourist revenues, a one per cent budget would be $2 million.

But the VIC operated on a budget of only $228,000 this year. It was time to move from the ranks of amateurs and form a professional organization dealing with the crucial tourist industry.

Higgin asked for a show of hands on how many of the 135 business persons present would support an increase in the business tax to pay for tourism.

Only a handful of hands went up. However, business consultant Allen Houghton said the question was premature.

"We are putting the cart before the horse. Let's get a report from the task force on the proposed budget before we discuss how we will finance it."

Higgin, Cooper and incoming chamber president Cedric Steele all supported that approach.

During the discussion, Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier said financing tourism through some form of tax was a safer approach than relying upon voluntary donations. The industry is too important to the community to rely upon voluntary measures.

At the same time, he said, it would be unfair to put the burden on property owners. The business tax increase would seem to be the best approach.

Later, in an interview, both Higgin and Cooper expressed satisfaction with the results of the meeting.

However, a late proposal that downtown business groups be added to the new organization could be troublesome, Higgin said.

"Downtown organizations all have a stake in the tourist industry but so do shopping centres. We can't very well have one without the other. And where would it end?"

Gary Walker of Seattle, director of the King County Visitor and Convention Bureau, said his experience had shown that businessmen who support something through taxation are not eager to make additional voluntary contributions.

However, Higgin responded that Victoria had a lot of catching up to do in this regard. While the Seattle bureau gets 66 per cent of its revenues from government sources, the Victoria group gets only 19 per cent.

The unspoken tribute.

"What do you say when a big part of your life suddenly goes away? First I sent flowers to the funeral. That was a matter of respect.

"But then when I thought about it awhile, I sent flowers to Jim's wife and the kids. That was a matter of caring."

Tourism B.C. plans hard sell on spring-come-first-here theme

Visitors will be invited to share the warmth of B.C. as early as the last week in February in a new promotion by Tourism B.C., executive director John Plul said Tuesday.

"We are following up our fall promotion with a new advertising campaign designed to alert North America to the message that spring comes first in British Columbia," he told a tourism seminar at the Princess Mary restuarant.

He said Tourism B.C. is trying to extend the tourist season into a year-around industry.

The provincial government had spent $209,000 on promoting visits to the province this autumn.

Both Victoria and Vancouver had benefited from the campaign according to reported increases in the number of visitors, he said.

Plul was making the keynote address at a day-long seminar sponsored jointly by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors Information Centre.

Plul said the provincial tourism theme for next year will be Fun Fest '80, which will be launched with a B.C. float in this weekend's Grey Cup parade. This will be followed by a $40,000 float in the Rose Bowl parade on New Year's Day. The float, containing 50,000 roses, would be seen by two million people in Pasadena and an additional 145 million on TV.

A new trip by the Royal Hudson is also planned for early in the new year, he said. It will go to California, Oregon and Washington State and about 300,000 Americans would inspect the displays in the two coaches.

STRATFORD
. . . 'The Big Island'

A new tourist package containing calendars of events, B.C. highway maps and postcards will be given to each visitor, he said.

Plul said Victoria should also get ready for Transpo 86, a trade fair planned in 1986 to mark the 100th birthday of Vancouver. Many tourist spinoffs would be available for Victoria.

Earlier, transportion consultant Ken Stratford told the seminar that V.I. should borrow an idea from Hawaii and promote "The Big Island."

Examples of possible promotions, he said, include a bicycle race from Port Hardy to Victoria and a yacht race from the north point of the island to the south.

This would demonstrate the size of V.I. as well as be an attraction, he said. The events should be held in spring to attract more tourists in that season.

Stratford also urged the formation of a transportation commission for the island and the creation of mini-cruises, especially in the off season. In addition, he said, service on B.C. Ferries should be improved through a reservations system.

Gary Walker of Seattle, director of the King County Visitor and Convention Bureau, said Victoria would make a mistake if it decided in favor of gambling as a tourist attraction, even a first-class type of operation such as the one in Monte Carlo.

"Among other problems," he said, "gambling would create divisions in your community."

He said Seattle and Victoria should attract "the clean dollar, not the dirty dollar of gambling."

Brian Weekley, a senior planner for the capital region board, told the seminar that everyone benefits from tourist spending.

"It is simply incorrect for a businessman to say that because a tourist does not walk into his premises and purchase a good or service directly his business does not benefit from tourist dollars.

"Every doctor, lawyer, new car sales dealer, hairdresser, and construction company benefits directly from tourist dollars either directly from the tourist himself or from someone who earns his living from tourism," Weekley said.

"We all have an important stake in our tourist resource."

Hawker curb pushed

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged the incoming city council to ban hawkers from the upper Causeway, limiting them to the lower level, president Mel Cooper said Tuesday.

He said the hawkers should be strictly controlled as to standards of cleanliness and types of food available for sale.

He told a tourism seminar the proposal has been sent to incoming mayor Bill Tindall.

Cooper said the chamber had been reluctant to get involved because in the past it has been criticized by the press no matter which stand it takes.

"If we speak out against the hawkers they say we are against small business and if we speak out in favor of them they say we just want people to make a fast buck. We can't win."

Safe driving labelled 'the positive choice'

Organizers would cringe if they heard someone say that last year's Safe Driving Week was a crashing success but it was.

And if their hope for an even better year this year is to be realized, then there will have to be even fewer crashes.

Dec. 1-7 has been designated as Canada's 24th consecutive Safe Driving Week in Canada and this year's theme is "Safe driving: the positive choice."

"We believe the theme conveys a simple but powerful message," says Canada Safety Council president W.L. Higgitt.

"A number of choices can be made but responsible drivers will opt for safety.

"Safety must always be uppermost if traffic accidents are to be prevented and their terrible costs meaningfully reduced."

In a letter accompanying the safety council's message, Prime Minister Joe Clark notes that last year, Safe Driving Week produced the highest reductions ever in traffic fatalities.

"Wear seat belts, slow down and drive with true feelings of responsibility for the safety of yourself and of those who share the roadway with you," Higgitt said.

Damn your conscience: riled U.K. press to Blunt

BLUNT . . . emerges from hiding

'Even Judas had grace to repent'

LONDON (AP) — The British press gave a scathing reception today to Anthony Blunt's claim that he spied for the Soviet Union in the Second World War as a matter of "political conscience." Members of the House of Commons demanded more information.

"Damn Your Conscience," said the headline on the front page of the conservative Daily Express.

"Even Judas Iscariot had the grace to repent," the conservative Sun said in an editorial.

Blunt, 72, an art historian who was surveyor of the Queen's art collection until he retired in 1972, emerged from five days of hiding Tuesday and told a few carefully selected journalists why he passed information to the Soviet Union while serving as a British intelligence officer from 1940 to 1945.

"In the mid-1930s," Blunt said in a statement before answering questions, "it seemed to me and many of my contemporaries that the Communist party and Russia constituted the only firm bulwark against fascism, since the Western democracies were taking an uncertain and compromising attitude towards Germany."

He said he later bitterly regretted his "appalling mistake" and grew to abhor the Soviet regime.

"There were many thousands of people involved in the fight against fascism, but they did not betray their country, nor did they recruit agents for a foreign power," said Labor MP Ted Leadbitter, whose questions in the House of Commons led Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to expose Blunt's actions last Thursday.

The house is scheduled later today to debate the affair, and angry MPs are demanding to know:

— Why Blunt was granted immunity from prosecution in 1964 in return for his confession to the security services, and who specifically approved it? Blunt said he believes it was Alec Douglas-Home, then prime minister. Lord Home has denied it.

— Was the Queen informed of his treason? "If she was," the generally pro-Labor Daily Mirror said in an editorial, "what was the convincing reason given to her for using the monarchy to shield a traitor from disgrace?"

— How many "moles" (spies) working for foreign powers have burrowed into positions of influence in Britain, protected by a "clubby" establishment?

Andrew Boyle, a former BBC journalist whose just-published book The Climate of Treason helped expose Blunt, said: "It might have been more appropriate if he had expressed a word of regret for his misdeeds."

Boyle wrote about Cambridge University in the 1930s when Blunt was a tutor, and Donald Maclean, Guy Burgess and Kim Philby were students.

Burgess and Maclean became British diplomats and Philby a key figure in British intelligence. They also became Soviet spies. Burgess and Maclean defected to the Soviet Union in 1951 and Philby followed in 1963.

A reporter for the domestic news agency Press Association asked Blunt whether he felt like a traitor.

"I feel I haven't betrayed my conscience," Blunt replied.

Retired Canadian held no. 6 in spy network

NEW YORK (CP) — A Canadian working in British intelligence may have been the man who tipped double agent Kim Philby that his cover had been blown in 1963, says an American journalist.

Ernie Volkman said in an interview Tuesday a Canadian, whom he did not identify, was part of the infamous Soviet spy case involving Philby, British diplomats Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean and, as just revealed, art historian Anthony Blunt.

Volkman is a former reporter for Newsday, the Long Island daily, and now a free-lance investigative journalist specializing in U.S. national security matters.

He said the Canadian working in MI-6, the supervisory arm of British intelligence, may have been responsible for Philby's escape, adding that intelligence circles in Canada, Britain and the United States were aware of the Canadian's identity.

(Prime Minister Clark told the Commons in Ottawa Monday that to his knowledge no Canadians were involved in the 1964 British spy scandal.)

Philby, a senior officer of MI-5, the British security service, was the so-called third man in the spy scandal, and Blunt now stands named as the fourth man.

Volkman said there was a fifth man, an American, and the Canadian was the sixth.

"It is believed, at this point, that the leak came from someone within MI-6, someone who was privy to the fact that the roof was about to cave in," Volkman said.

That man, Volkman said, was the Canadian, who eventually returned to work for Canadian intelligence after leaving MI-6. He now is retired, Volkman added.

The American writer also said he believes the sealed files of the Taschereau royal commission on the Gouzenko case will never be revealed.

The files, which cover the investigation of the Russian spy ring unveiled by Igor Gouzenko, the Soviet embassy cipher clerk-defector, were to be opened in 1976, but the Trudeau government ordered them sealed until 1986.

The Taschereau files are "much too explosive, he said, and there are similar problems with the files of the RCMP's "Operation Featherbed." A Toronto newspaper said in 1977 that the Featherbed file was started in 1968 when RCMP officers obtained information arising from the Gouzenko case.

Solicitor-general Allan Lawrence said in the Commons Monday Featherbed is under "intense consideration" by the government.

Mexicana Air strike loss put at $4M

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Officials say a 21-day-old strike by Mexicana Airlines at the height of Mexico's tourist season already has caused losses of more than $1 million.

"The situation is very severe and we believe it should not continue," said Guillermo Rossell de la Lama, the secretary of tourism.

Workers at Mexicana, Mexico's largest private airline, are demanding a 20-per-cent wage hike. Management is countering with an offer of 15 per cent.

Officials were still protecting 4 million tourists would visit Mexico.

Witness accepts synthetic blood

NEW YORK (AP) — Jehovah's Witnesses say the Bible forbids blood transfusions even in cases of life or death. Now a member of the religious sect has become the first U.S. patient to receive a transfusion using a synthetic blood substitute.

The patient, who was not identified, was given about six pints of the experimental solution at the University of Minnesota Hospital in Minneapolis to replace blood lost during surgery four weeks earlier, hospital spokesman Bob Lee said Tuesday. Normally, the human body holds 17 pints of blood.

The manufacturer, Alpha Therapeutic Corp. of Pasadena, Calif., quoted doctors as saying the transfusion was a success, but Lee said the physician, Dr. Robert Anderson, felt it was too early to discuss the results. Anderson could not be reached for comment.

Thomas Drees, president of Alpha Therapeutic, said the 67-year-old patient underwent surgery for vascular disease in his leg and was discharged from the hospital, but was later readmitted with severe anemia.

The blood substitute, named Fluosol, was invented by Green Cross Corp., Alpha Therapeutic's parent company in Osaka, Japan, and has been tested successfully on about 50 Japanese patients, Drees said.

However, the substance has not completed testing for marketing approval in the United States and special permission of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration was needed for the Minneapolis transfusion. Drees said permission also would be required for any subsequent use.

The company said Fluosol will require about two more years of testing before it is approved for routine use in Japan. The company estimates it will take about five years to complete animal and human testing required for U.S. marketing approval.

Fluosol is the most highly developed of several experimental blood substitutes.

Viet 'mafia' terrorizes L.A. refugees

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vietnamese extortion rings have been squeezing money and services out of Vietnamese refugees in both Orange and Los Angeles counties for more than three months, published reports say.

Two gangs of Vietnamese refugees, the Frogmen and the Pink Knights, are preying primarily on businessmen in Vietnamese communities, says the Anaheim Bulletin.

Orange County police officials and Sgt. Shiro Tamita, head of the Asian force of the Los Angeles police department, confirmed the existence of the two groups Monday, says the newspaper.

Anaheim police detective Joe Bryan said the Frogmen are unemployed Vietnamese men who support themselves with extortion. "They demand money and services in exchange for being left alone," Bryan said.

The two factions oppose each other, said Anaheim Police Chief George Tilsch, but "they are not warring factions."

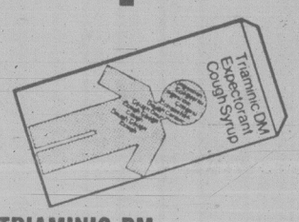

"We are seeing the same thing in the Vietnamese community that was seen with the Mafia out of Sicily," he said. "The people are terrified and we are having a hell of a time getting these people to talk. These people are in fear of their life."

Police estimate there are about 60,000 Vietnamese refugees in Orange and Los Angeles counties, with the majority in Orange County.

Charles, right, talks to Welsh Guards

Prince in Ireland

BELFAST (AP) — Prince Charles shrugged off the possibility of terrorist attacks Tuesday and flew secretly to Northern Ireland to visit three British regiments of which he is an honorary colonel.

Meanwhile, Northern Ireland Secretary Humphrey Atkins released a paper calling for a peace convention to end 10 years of bloody fighting in the Eire.

The prince caught British troops by surprise as he stepped from a helicopter normally used to spot and chase terrorists of the Irish Republican Army. On Aug. 27, the IRA blew up a boat in Donegal Bay, killing the prince's uncle, Lord Mountbatten, and three others.

First stop in his six-hour trip was Armagh.

Board members resign in row over Rolls-Royce

LONDON (Reuter) — All 10 members of the National Enterprise Board, the government body that controls Britain's nationalized industries, were reported to have resigned Tuesday night in a row over the future of the state-owned Rolls-Royce company.

Informed sources said the members were forced to step down after being told by Industry Secretary Sir Keith Joseph that the government has decided to take charge of Rolls-Royce.

The board, which became the sole owner of Rolls-Royce when the firm was nationalized in 1971 to save it from financial collapse, has argued that it board should be allowed to continue providing an independent overview of the company's finances and performance.

The board also has been critical of the financial discipline of Rolls-Royce and has opposed the company's request for £509.9 million ($1.29 billion) in government funds to finance development programs over the next five years as too costly.

Sir Kenneth Keith, the Rolls-Royce chairman who has said he will retire next year, has been bitterly opposed to what he considers as the board's interference in the running of the company.

The Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, which took office in May, is committed to reducing state control on industry and has slashed funds to the board.

Former industry secretary Eric Varley on Tuesday night charged that the government is in the process of destroying the board.

Union turfs composer for eyeing Israel move

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Arvo Pyart, the Soviet Union's top modernist composer, has been expelled from the official composers' union after applying to emigrate, family friends said Tuesday.

Pyart has been criticized by leaders of the official composers' union for his 12-tone works.

The friends said he had applied to go to Israel where the parents of his wife, Nora, live.

Meanwhile, the head of the composers' union, Tikhon Khrennikov, made a plea to his colleagues Tuesday to condemn a book published in the West of the memoirs of the late composer Dmitry Shostakovich.

The book particularly criticizes Khrennikov, 66, for his attitude to Shostakovich and other musicians during the Stalin era. The book portrays Shostakovich, who died in 1975 at age 69, as deeply cynical about the Communist state.

Free son, pleads Korchnoi

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Self-exiled Soviet chess grandmaster Viktor Korchnoi appealed to world public opinion Tuesday to obtain the release of his 20-year-old-son Igor from a Soviet prison.

Korchnoi said he has sent several letters and telegrams to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, Pope John Paul, President Carter and other world leaders in an attempt to free his son. Korchnoi said Igor was imprisoned one week ago in Moscow for evading military service.

The former Soviet grandmaster defected to the West in July, 1976, and now lives in Zurich, Switzerland, as a stateless refugee.

His wife, Isabella, and son applied for exit visas several times after Korchnoi's defection but were denied them, he said.

"They (Soviet authorities) desperately struggle to keep my family as hostages," Korchnoi told reporters at a news conference. "I'm not an important person. What can I do to hurt the Soviet state?

"I don't know any rocket secrets. I'm not an atomic spy. The secrets I know are how to create a strong pawn structure."

The grandmaster said his son, on leaving the Leningrad Polytechnic Institute in 1977 in hopes of obtaining a visa, became eligible for the draft and was was told he had to join the military, his father said. Soviet citizens normally are not granted exit visas for at least five years after completing military service.

Igor did not want to join the military, his father said, because "he doesn't want to serve in the army of the country which has treated his father so badly."

Igor was arrested Nov. 13 after hiding out for more than a year.

The elder Korchnoi distributed a letter to Brezhnev signed by parliament members of the Netherlands and prominent Dutch and West German chess players. He said most of his letters to world leaders have been unanswered, including those to Carter and Brezhnev.

Thousands flee floods

SALONICA, Greece (Reuter) — At least 24 people were feared killed and thousands made homeless Tuesday by flooding after torrential rain in Yugoslavia and northern Greece.

Police said more than 15 people were believed drowned in villages in northern Greece with 5,000 villagers homeless after the Axios River, surging through southern Yugoslavia, overflowed its banks.

Several villages along the river were evacuated, and the government mounted a rescue operation to overcome what was described as a major disaster for northern Greece.

Floods in southern, eastern and central Yugoslavia killed nine people and damaged houses, crops, bridges, roads, railways and electricity and water supplies.

Four of Yugoslavia's six republics — Montenegro, Serbia, Macedonia and Bosnia-Herzegovina — were badly hit. Rail service between Yugoslavia and Greece was disrupted for a second day after border bridges were washed away.

Kirkland AFL-CIO chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lane Kirkland, U.S. organized labor's shy and scholarly administrator, has won election as president of the 13.6-million-member AFL-CIO, ending a quarter-century under George Meany.

Kirkland, 57, the ailing Meany's second-in-command and hand-picked successor, was elected without opposition by 1,000 delegates attending the labor organization's 13th convention.

Strike at JAL cancels 51 flights

TOKYO (AP) — A walkout by Japan Airlines' two biggest labor unions pressing demands for revised retirement pay entered its second day today, forcing the cancellation of 51 flights.

The strike action affected an estimated 5,700 passengers, officials said.

More than 100 co-pilots, flight engineers and chief pursers of the 1,182-member cockpit crew union and the 2,850-member cabin crew union are on strike.

Israeli mobs protest prices

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel's capital erupted in violent protests over the government's drastic "beat inflation" program and demonstrators demanded funds be used to fight poverty rather than create Jewish settlements.

Police Tuesday used batons and tear gas to disperse hundreds of protesters who stoned passing cars and burned tires and garbage trolleys to protest a 50-100 per cent hike in the price of bread, milk, and other foods and a slash in government food subsidies as a money-saving move.

Police said there were several injuries on each side and at least 17 demonstrators were arrested.

The frenzied demonstrators, who tied up traffic and caused property damage, shouted "Begin, go home!," and "Down with price hikes and (Jewish) settlements!".

The protests, which took place simultaneously in five different Jerusalem locations, were organized by the Israeli Black Panthers, a militant group of Oriental Jews pressing for economic equality.

The violent demonstrations coincided with the start of a Knesset (parliament) debate on the new economic measures approved Monday and designed to curb Israel's 150 percent annual inflation rate.

The debate was put off to today after lawmakers defeated three no-confidence motions over plans by Prime Minister Menachem Begin's coalition government to expel Nablus Mayor Bassam Shaka and boost Jewish settlement in the occupied West bank at a cost of $4.7 billion.

The no-confidence motions were presented by the Labor Party, the largest opposition group, and the tiny Communist and Leftist Shelli parties.

Shaka, 48, has been on a hunger strike in an Israeli jail since Friday to protest his detention and threatened expulsion. His wife appealed the deportation order and a Supreme Court hearing is scheduled for Thursday.

Begin, responding to an appeal from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said the matter is before the Israeli Supreme Court.

BARBADOS

Barbados

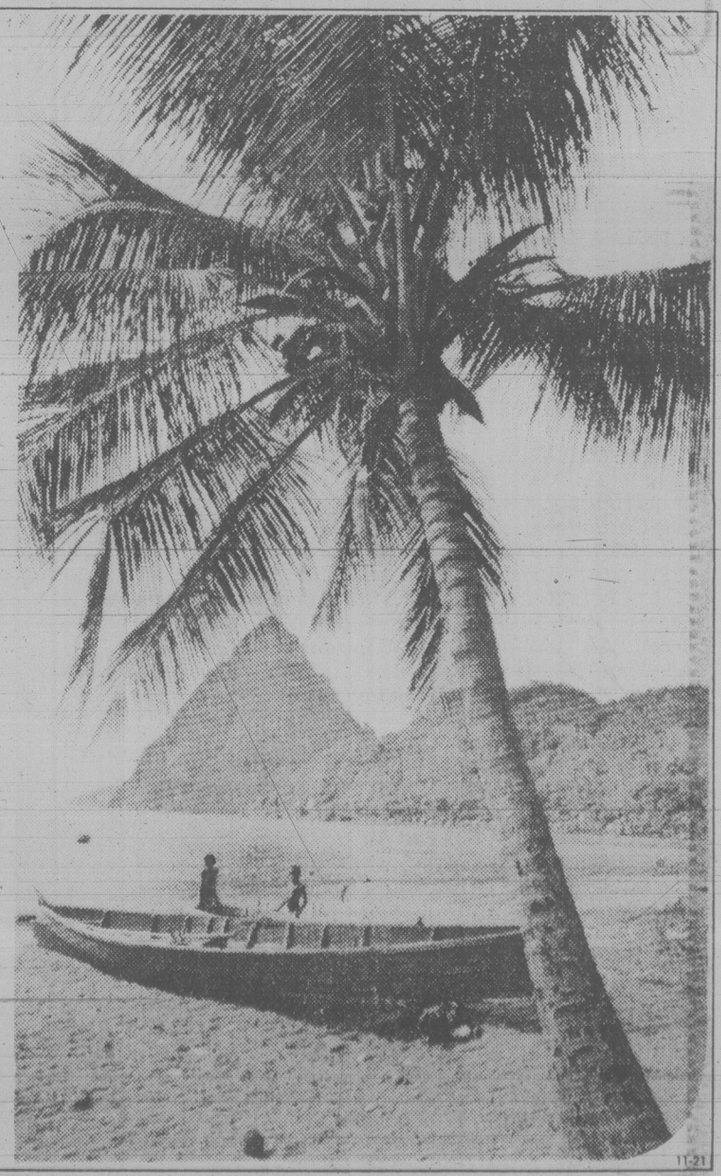

Barbados is beautiful soft beaches, sunny tropical days, a tall cool drink beside the warm blue sea. Barbados is Canada's island in the sun. You can choose the fashionable west coast, home of many sophisticated resorts and calm, placid waters. Or the south coast, where informality is the rule in the many casual, relaxed apartment hotels.

There is lots to explore in Barbados. In Bridgetown's Trafalgar Square, you can see the original Lord Nelson statue, overlooking the "Careenage" with its sailing schooners, and picturesquely uniformed harbour police. At Bathsheba, on the rugged east coast, lie the exhilarating surf-splashed shores of the Atlantic...a great picnic spot. Your Fiesta representative can arrange tours for you that will show you the best of this island paradise.

And nightlife is one of the highlights of Barbadian living...barbecues, steel bands, calypso groups, discos, the exciting limbo dances, and a full range of dining spots.

Fiesta's wide choice of accommodation in Barbados offers everything from efficiency apartment hotels for a relaxed, budget-minded holiday, to deluxe beach front resorts offering everything under the warm Caribbean sun.

Whether you have explored a dozen Caribbean islands, or this is your first experience, you'll find the singular charms of Barbados completely captivating.

'Society has no answer' - judge

'Attachment' leads to jail

A 26-year-old man with a problem for which society has no answer was sentenced in county court Tuesday to two years less a day in jail after pleading guilty to attempted rape.

Terry Harrison pleaded not guilty to unlawfully confining the woman but this matter was not further dealt with by Judge E.J.C. Stewart.

The court was told Harrison had a fixation for the woman who had been kind to him.

The two counts in the indictment arose from an incident in a Saanich house Aug. 19.

"It's a case of a person with a problem for which our society simply has no answer," said Stewart, adding he had little choice but to impose jail.

He said there is no real evidence Harrison is a danger to women or others generally but he could not jail him indefinitely to protect one woman. There was some professional indication that he will in due course forget his "attachment" for this woman.

Defence counsel Scott Marshall, in explaining the fixation, said the woman was the first female who was kind to the accused. But Harrison misinterpreted her well-intentioned efforts as affection for him and in the end wanted police to arrest him because he knew what he had done was wrong.

Harrison suffers from a personality disorder not rooted in a mental disorder but a social maladjustment, he said. Harrison didn't have a mental illness but was unable to operate in society.

The man has been in institutions almost all his life, including foster homes, hospitals for the mentally and physically retarded, and jails.

"There's no institution that is suitable for him," he said. "There is no satisfactory solution as such. The only hope is that as such people become older they socialize better."

Marshall said there is no answer in terms of treatment.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Harrison has a criminal record for four counts of breaking and entering and theft, two thefts, possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, possession of stolen property and two escapes.

After reviewing his background, Law said the prosecution's concern is that Harrison says he loves the woman and will see her again and if any weight is to be given to his statements, he has an obsession with her.

He also said it appears there is little treatment which can be given Harrison and if he is jailed, he will have to be kept in protective custody.

A sentence of two years less a day in jail, said Law, means Harrison can be free in 14 months.

Also in county court, Judge Frederick Melvin found Gregory Robert Twyman, 19, guilty of assault causing bodily harm to Gary Clarke, 15, in an incident at Market Square March 10. Twyman will be sentenced Nov. 29.

Clarke testified he was punched three times by Twyman, twice in the right eye and once in the left eye.

He said Twyman approached him and said "you're the one that knocked my garbage cans over." Clarke said he replied "I don't know you" and the punching began.

$750,000 federal grant to disputed Ganges sewer

The B.C. municipal affairs ministry said Tuesday a federal grant of $750,000 has been made available to help build a controversial sewer project at Ganges on Salt Spring Island.

But newly-elected Capital Regional District director Yvette Valcourt of Salt Spring says she will continue to oppose the project.

The Pollution Control Board will hold a public hearing at 7 p.m. Monday in the Salt Spring elementary school at Ganges.

Cost of the project is estiat $2,600,000 and opponents say this would mean residents would have to pay $45,380 annual debt costs over 20 years.

The provincial government would make a yearly grant of $122,620 to help meet the total annual debt costs of $168,000.

Valcourt says sewer installations inevitably cost more than the estimate and the debt retirement costs, plus operating costs, would have to be borne by about 210 residents, most of them elderly.

"All the surveys show the effluent cannot get out of the harbor," she said.

"Only 12 properties were polluting and all have been corrected except two."

Valcourt predicted that after Monday's hearing, the PCB will have no choice but to revoke the permit for the sewer.

Teachers assess promotion impact

Greater Victoria teachers will know this week whether a $12,690 public relations promotion was effective during the election campaign for district trustees.

Teachers' association president Trevor Calkins said a survey like a Gallup poll is being undertaken and a report is expected by Thursday.

The object of the promotion was to raise public awareness of educational issues such as the pupil-teacher classroom ratio, which can be misleading because any person in the school administration holding teaching certification is included even though they do not have classes.

"We're not naive about what the results might be," Calkins said, adding that 70 per cent of B.C.'s population have no children in school and might be expected to have little interest.

The GVTA co-ordinated the promotional campaign using funds mainly contributed by B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Lt.-Gen. R.J. Lane (Rtd.) of 1535 Cedar Glen is the new national chairman of the Federation of Military and United Services Institutes of Canada.

Lane, elected at a recent Calgary conference, was deputy commander-in-chief of the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) before retiring in 1972.

He succeeds the late Lt.-Col. F.J. Picking, also from Victoria, who was instrumental in founding the federation in 1973. The federation has more than 10,000 members in 22 military organizations and United Services Institutes.

The Picking Cup, donated by the Royal United Services Institute of V.I. in recognition of his services, was presented to Major T.M. McConnell (Rtd.), president of the Edmonton United Services Institute, at the Calgary conference by Supt. E.A.F. Holm, RCMP (Rtd.) of Victoria.

Before the judge

A youth who turned 18 last Thursday was given a 10-day jail sentence by Judge Fred Green in provincial court Tuesday.

Michael Harold Wright, 3933 Quadra, had pleaded guilty earlier to forgery.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said the offence occurred Oct. 2 when Wright obtained a blank cheque from J.K. Cameron Trucking Ltd. while visiting the neighboring Cameron residence.

He then forged it in the amount of $1,550 and took it to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 2339 Beacon where an assistant accountant approved it for payment.

When arrested Wright first denied the offence but then admitted it, stating he used $1,197.20 to pay Superior Collision for repairs to his car and the rest to pay off personal debts.

Defence lawyer Stephen Kelliher said Wright's $7,000 car was now up for sale and described his client as coming from a privileged background who had been denied room and board at home and a recent application for welfare. Kelliher described the offence as "an awful mistake" and said Wright's enjoyment was centred around his muscle car.

Laughton replied that Wright had been described to him as an over-indulgent, spoiled youth whose conduct led to his family dissociating itself from him.

Judge Green said the offence was extremely serious and distasteful. The judge observed that Wright is not in a position to pay a fine or compensation to the bank but also noted Wright is not entitled to a suspended sentence because of the large amount of money involved.

Green imposed a one-year probation period and ordered Wright to seek and maintain employment and pay compensation to the bank by June 15, 1980.

A 23-year-old man was remanded until Dec. 17 for a pre-sentence report after he pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Curtis William Christie, 1180 Colville, entered the plea in connection with a Nov. 3 incident at the Century Inn beer parlor.

Court was informed Christie challenged the victim of the assault to a fight after accusing him of making passes at his female companion. After the victim refused, Christie punched him in the face. A waiter ordered Christie outside and was joined by another employee after Christie refused to go. Once outside, Christie got into another fight before leaving in a taxi.

In the taxi, Crown counsel Wayne Smith said, Christie bragged, "There sure is a lot of guys in there scared of me now."

Christie had previous convictions for mischief, manslaughter, possession of a dangerous weapon, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, possession of stolen property, and armed robbery.

Two persons were charged with theft and possession of stolen property belonging to the strata council of condominiums at Laurel Point.

Charged with theft over $200 and possession of furnishings and antiques were 19-year-old Roger Saqui of 1126 Currie and 18-year-old Cheryl Taves of 939 Garthland.

Both elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing was set for March 18.

Fines totalling $400 were levied on 24-year-old Michael Todd-Hunter Dmytruk, 716 Danbrook, after he pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident and dangerous driving.

Laughton said the charges stemmed from an Oct. 27 incident which began about 1 a.m. on the Island Highway. Dmytruk passed a vehicle on the right-hand side and cut in front, forcing the other driver to brake violently.

Dmytruk then pulled up behind another car and passed it on the proper side but on a double-solid line. At that point, Laughton said, Dmytruk lost control and fish-tailed, sideswiping an oncoming car before speeding off.

Colwood RCMP located Dmytruk's vehicle at his residence about 10:25 p.m. but were not able to interview him until the next afternoon when Dmytruk admitted being the driver.

Defence lawyer Kelliher said the car which Dmytruk first passed on the wrong side had been going unusually slow, irritating Dmytruk.

Kelliher also said the driver of that car then sped after Dmytruk, staying on Dmytruk's bumper.

Green imposed a $225 fine for the hit-and-run and $175 on the dangerous driving conviction. He also placed Dmytruk on six months probation and ordered him to produce a certificate showing he had taken a defensive driving course within that period.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Dennis Joseph Darrell Beauvillier, 31, of 214 Prevost, $325; and Morris Roy Nies, 33, of 7994 Lochside, $275.

Wait for child care study, pediatrician tells district

No firm decision on the location and form of obstetric and pediatric care should be made until a study is completed on total child health care for the Capital Regional District, says Dr. Basil Boulton.

One of Victoria's leading pediatricians, Bolton said the regional hospital and health planning commission agreed in early October that such a study be made.

Since that time, there have been meetings between the region, the health ministry, Queen Alexandra Hospital for Crippled Children and the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

"It would be irresponsible to consider any firm decisions until the study is completed," Boulton said.

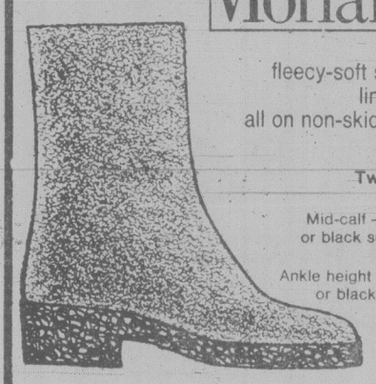

Boulton, who is president of the Queen Alexandra's medical advisory committee and adviser to the hospital's society, advised the commission in 1977 to combine pediatrics and obstetrics services at one hospital.

He did not agree, however, with the commission's decision to place the unit at the new Helmcken Road hospital.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital's board and chiefs of medical staff said last weekthere should be units at both hospitals.

Taking away pediatric and obstetrics from the Jubilee, they said, would seriously threaten patient care and erode the base of general practitioners that the hospital needs to function efficiently.

Another study ordered on Saanich efficiency

A plan to increase Saanich ouncil's efficiency stalled t the committee level Tuesday when a new study was rdered.

The finance committee as asked for another look at roposed structural changes ased on Mayor Mel Couvelier's plan for a manager-ouncil administration.

Committee members vanted to know how much noney the changes would ost the taxpayer.

Ald. John Mika asked for a nore detailed study on reducing the number of committees council has now.

The changes were prepared by municipal administrator William Tremayne.

Couvelier proposes hiring a manager to take charge of certain administrative functions and routine decisions now made at committee level.

Numerous small committees could be abolished and council would be free to get on with important policy-making, he believes.

Tremayne proposes combining standing committees into two committees of the whole council with power to make decisions on items not requiring bylaws.

For example, the committees could award tenders, re-allocate budget funds, and deal with Agricultural Land Reserve Appeals.

He also says council should not deal with administrative matters that could be handled by staff.

Municipal clerk Bob Sharp should be appointed deputy administrator and administrative assistant Paul McKivett should be given more responsibility, Tremayne recommends.

A secretary would be hired to fill the vacancy created by the shuffling and to help the administrative staff handle the increased workload.

Daffodil or observatory, which?

The choice between a daffodil or an observatory on a Saanich coat-of-arms will be made by the incoming municipal council.

Council has been discussing the idea of an official coat-of-arms for some time and has had two designs drawn up.

But aldermen are having a hard time deciding between them.

So council's finance committee Tuesday transferred the responsibility to the new council and suggested it ask the public to submit some designs.

Municipal employee Ken Middleton prepared two drawings based on the Saanich seal. One has the observatory on top and the other a daffodil, representing the district's most lucrative industry.

Mystery bank account may have been closed

A mysterious Social Credit arty bank account used to inance the Vancouver semiar where the dirty tricks ape was recorded, may ave been closed.

The account came to light hen Premier Bill Bennett's enior aide, Tony Tozer, said t was used to pay the exenses of researchers Ellen lacKay and Jack Kelly, ho advocated that party embers play dirty by writng phoney letters to newsapers.

Hugh Harris, the party's xecutive director, said uesday he would be very urprised if the account had ot been closed and he said in he future the party will hanle all campaign funds.

"In the future anything one in the way of seminars r in the way of door-step ampaigns will be done through the party board and at the approval of the party board."

Party officials, including a member of the last provincial election campaign committee, have said they know nothing about the account.

Tozer has not returned from holidays to explain who had signing authority for the account.

U.S. tuna fishermen trial delay

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rovincial court trial of 11 .S. tuna fishermen charged ith violating Canada's 200-ile fishing limit this sumer has been postponed to ec. 21.

An angry Judge Kerry mith granted the delay uesday so that defence lawer Robert Higinbotham ould ask the B.C. Supreme ourt to determine whether he courts have the authority o deal with the charges.

Higinbotham said that hile Canada may want a 00-mile fishing zone, Parament has no authority to atrol foreign vessels beond the 12-mile limit estabshed by the 1954 Geneva onvention.

Higinbotham said he will eek the Supreme Court reiew as soon as possible, but will take him at least six ays to arrange a date.

Smith chided Higinbotham or wasting valuable court ime. He said the lawyer hould have anticipated his urisdictional questions and pplied for court time to deal ith them long before the ase went to trial.

"I find it very unsatisfactory that valuable time was vasted in this manner," the udge said.

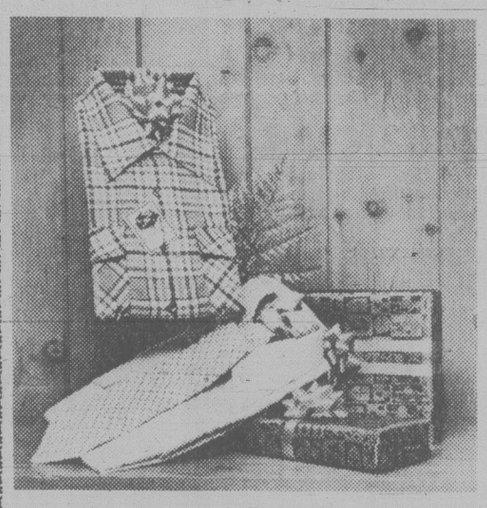

"I apologize to all those vaiting witnesses for their aluable time."

Fifteen of the 68 Crown itnesses scheduled to appear in the trial were in court uesday.

The fishermen were chared last summer after they ollowed migrating tuna into anadian waters. Their atches were seized, but the aptains and their ships ere released after posting ond.

Tory gov't may have short life

OTTAWA (CP) — Only a day after federal byelections made him more necessary than ever to the minority Conservative government, Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy has left Prime Minister Joe Clark guessing about his future again.

Roy rose in the Commons Tuesday to denounce government legislation that would allow deduction of home mortgage interest and property taxes from taxable income, joining the Liberal and New Democratic Party opposition.

He stopped short of saying whether he would vote against the legislation the government considers so important that Finance Minister John Crosbie has said its defeat could cause a new general election.

"It is ill-conceived, it was not given due consideration, and it is not part of a series of measures that a new government should propose to the Canadian population," said Roy.

In other parliamentary business Tuesday, royal assent was given legislation giving the government $16.4 billion to pay its bills until the end of December.

The legislation became law just in time. If there had been a delay the public service payroll would have been late.

Clark needs Roy's five-man Social Credit group to survive a vote of non-confidence in the Commons. NDP and Liberal wins in the Prince Albert, Sask., and Burin-St. George's, Nfld., byelections Monday left the Conservative-Socred combination in the Commons with only a one-vote majority.

Social Credit has twice already this session come to the rescue when the Liberals and NDP ganged up on the government.

In the last non-confidence vote, Nov. 6, the government survived with a two-vote majority after Roy demanded and got assurances from Clark that Quebec and the Atlantic provinces would have enough fuel for this winter. Liberals also charge that Conservatives backed Roy's bid for special Commons consideration.

Now Roy has said in his first speech on the subject that the mortgage bill does not do enough for Quebec.

Amendments are needed, he said, echoing some arguments already used by Liberals and New Democrats ever since the plan was first announced months ago as part of the Conservative May 22 election campaign.

Clark told Liberal questioners earlier Tuesday that the government is willing to consider reasonable amendments to the scheme.

But, echoing threats made by Crosbie the night before, he said the government will resist efforts to delay the legislation so long that 3.8 million home-owners would have to wait another year to claim their first benefits.

Crosbie indicated the government might be willing to go to the people if the opposition would not pass the legislation, by Christmas.

Phone rights not for Flynn

OTTAWA (CP) — If policemen had to tell suspects they are entitled to call a lawyer, criminals would abuse the right to remain silent under police questioning, Justice Minister Jacques Flynn said Tuesday.

He was commenting on a Canadian Bar Association proposal to amend the Criminal Code to require police to inform a person when he is arrested that he has the right under the Bill of Rights to call a lawyer.

"The principle is nice," Flynn told reporters after his meeting with the association. But he said provincial attorneys-general are opposed to the idea.

"They fear it would hamper police work. . . . It would put them (police) in a straight jacket," Flynn said.

"It would serve more the real criminal than the person who has no criminal experience because a real criminal would know about it and would abuse it," he added.

"No one is a criminal until he is found guilty," replied bar association president Gordon Henderson.

He said Canadians should be better informed about their civil liberties.

Many lawyers feel the United States has gone too far in saying that a person must be found not guilty if police do not inform him of his right to call a lawyer, Henderson said.

He said the bar association advocated a middle ground: Any information taken from an accused before he is informed of his rights could not be introduced as evidence at his trial.

FLQ plot open book, 'spy' says

MONTREAL (CP) — A police "collaborator" is willing to testify that he informed anti-terrorist officers of the activities of a key Front de Liberation du Quebec cell in December, 1970, the Keable commission said Tuesday.

The Viger Information Cell provided "support" to the FLQ's Liberation Cell, which sparked the 1970 October Crisis by kidnapping British diplomat James Cross, commission lawyer Jean-Pierre Lussier said.

The disclosure that the informant would appear came after a tense exchange between Lussier and a Montreal police officer, who objected strongly to revealing the identity of his sources in the Quebec terrorist milieu.

Det.-Capt. Julien Giguere, a senior Montreal anti-terrorist officer in 1970, said police had decided that it would be "inopportune" to arrest Viger cell members despite the fact there was enough evidence.

Arrests would have tipped other FLQ terrorists, who were "more or less disorganized," about the information police had about them, Giguere testified at the Quebec inquiry's first public hearing in seven months.

Lawyer Lussier attempted to push Giguere further, asking whether police decided not to round up the cell members to protect a "collaborator."

Giguere, backed by the Montreal police department, then raised a lengthy series of objections to publicly revealing police sources, saying this would involve an "betrayal" of his professional duty. The final result was that his testimony was suspended.

But in an angry outburst, Commissioner Jean Keable disclosed the inquiry had evidence that police had a "human source" in the Viger Cell and read an affidavit from the unnamed informant saying he wanted to testify publicly, with access to police files, to set the record straight.

Keable expressed astonishment that objections were being raised, since Montreal police director Henri-Paul Vignola and his lawyers had already been informed that the man wanted to testify. The veil of secrecy protecting police sources generally falls when an informant agrees to speak out.

Keable said the police informant was benefiting from an unspecified form of protection.

Earlier, Giguere has testified that senior police from three forces — the RCMP, Montreal and Quebec provincial police — had decided against raiding the Viger cell at a meeting in mid-December, 1970.

At the time, the three forces were embroiled in a manhunt for the FLQ's Chenier cell which, led by Paul Rose, had kidnapped former Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, murdered in October.

Less than two weeks earlier, on Dec. 3, the Liberation Cell had released Cross unharmed in exchange for safe passage to Cuba.

The Chenier cell members were arrested on Dec. 22, and later convicted on a variety of murder and kidnapping charges.

Giguere began raising objections when lawyer Lussier asked why police did not arrest Viger cell members after Dec. 22, once the Rose manhunt was over. The officer briefly mentioned anti-terrorist officers' desire to avoid tipping their hand.

Hecklers stifled

TORONTO (CP) — Copies of The Hecklers, a new compendium of Canadian political cartoons, are being recalled because the publisher considers a cartoon depicting the relationship between Ottawa and Quebec to be in bad taste.

A McClelland and Stewart spokesman also said the cartoon by Terry Mosher should have been deleted because it had not yet appeared elsewhere.

Ballet workshops planned weekly

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Vancouver Island Ballet Society is responding to calls for more workshops of the kind initiated last summer, when many Victoria students were given a taste of professional ballet theatre production.

In the summer session the society's artistic director, Lillian Griffiths, introduced the young dancers to variations from such standard ballets as Swan Lake, Napoli and Sleeping Beauty.

Because this concept was so well received, the VIBS has formed a sub-section under the title, Victoria Ballet Workshop.

The first meeting of the workshop will be held Thursday at 6:30 p.m., and thereafter at the same time every week, providing it is suitable to members.

Mrs. Griffiths will again direct the workshop. It will provide those who would like to participate actively in future productions a chance to do so, either as dancers, from age 11, or backstage making costumes, building sets, assisting with makeup and all other activities involved in ballet production in a theatre.

The first meeting will explore the extent of interest in performing classical works, answer questions, unscramble any problems and enroll active members. A class will be included in the evening's program.

Some of the ballet works being considered for future production are Les Sylphides, Prince Igor and Carnaval. An approach to the longer classics will have to wait until there is a large enough group of dancers available.

Lillian Griffiths has either danced in or produced all these ballets. She has volunteered her services to get the workshop started and has set up the weekly two-hour program.

It will start with a short warm-up class followed by rehearsals of excerpts from the ballets.

After that there will be a double work class for more advanced members and here as much male help as possible is urgently required. It is not essential that men have previous dance experience.

The society has been particularly fotunate in finding a location for the workshops. With the help of Rev. Bruce Molloy, a home has been located which is so atmospherically right that it might have been transferred from London.

It is the original upper chamber of St.Andrew's Church, a large room with tall oval windows for the dance sessions and a smaller room for backstage activities. It is fully equipped with washrooms and changerooms and its central location is ideal.

For those planning to attend Thursday's inaugural meeting, go up the stairs from the Broughton Street entrance to the church, next to the carpark.

Saanich: Stratford of West?

Saanich could become the Stratford of the West Coast, according to a spokesman for a year-old Shakespearean festival society which wants to construct a replica of the Globe Theatre on the 7.7 acre Maltwood Art Museum property.

Conrad Boyce says the Lord Chamberlain's Players Society will raise through private donations the $500,000 needed to build the outdoor theatre.

But the society wants Saanich to help convert The Thatch, formerly home of the Maltwood art collection, into another theatre and landscape the grounds.

It submitted a brief to Saanich council this week giving details of the proposal.

Saanich has almost completed purchase of the property for $375,000 from the University of Victoria and is wondering what to do with it. It asked the public to submit proposals.

The society wants to construct the first exact replica of the famous London theatre, built by Shakespeare on the Thames river in 1599 and later destroyed by fire.

Saanich's Shakespearean festival would attract international talent and audiences during its April to October operation, Boyce says.

Local theatre groups could use the theatres in winter while the company tours, he suggests.

The society, a nonprofit group, was formed a year ago to look for a location in Greater Victoria because the area's climate and English atmosphere make it a perfect for a Shakespearean festival.

Saanich is holding a public meeting in The Thatch Dec. 15 at 1 p.m. to discuss 11 proposals submitted by members of the community for use of the property.

Repairs expensive

Making repairs to his electric golf cart proved costly for Wilfred Cain Tuesday.

Cain was working on the cart in the driveway of his home at 1852 Taylor when a spark ignited a gas container.

The resulting fire in his garage caused about $15,000 damage.

Saanich police Const. Francis Graf spotted smoke and saw Cain trying to put out the blaze with a garden hose.

Graf alerted the fire department and then went into the house and helped Mrs. Cain to safety.

Hecklers: cartoon history

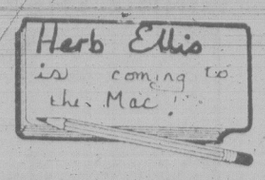

OTTAWA (CP) — The history of political cartooning in Canada, from a nasty bit of aristocratic business named George Townshend to today's Golden Age of the art, is heralded in The Hecklers, a book launched at a Press Club bash Tuesday night.

Co-authors Terry Mosher, drawing under the pen-name Aislin — his daughter's name — for the Montreal Gazette, and political commentator Peter Desbarats of Global Television, are eager that the volume be taken seriously as a well-researched history of the art.

Indeed Mosher has been on the project seven years, first as a researcher on a film by the same name for the National Film Board of Canada, which provided the initial financing and enthusiasm for the book.

"This is not just a collection of the weird and wacky of Canadian cartooning," said Desbarats.

It is lavishly illustrated with more than 500 cartoons, the pick of the bunch dating back to Townshend's acid efforts against General James Wolfe at the time of the conquest of Quebec in 1759, but concentrating mainly on the last 50 years.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

The finesse is undoubtedly a marvelous instrument of play, but the fact is that it is used much too often. Whether or not a finesse succeeds is mostly a matter of luck, and it is therefore unwise to rely solely on the luck factor if there are other means available that are less precarious.

Here is a case in point. Let's assume you're declarer at four spades and West leads the king of clubs. You start by counting your losers — two hearts, a diamond and a club — and note that one of them might be saved by finessing the queen of hearts.

But the heart finesse has only a 50 per cent chance of success, so you look for other ways and means of increasing your chances of making the contract. Actually, there's a method of play that elevates your chances to 100 per cent.

You win the king of clubs with the ace, draw two rounds of trumps, and cash the A-K of diamonds. You then exit with a diamond, not caring at all where the king of hearts is located.

Let's say that East wins the diamond with the jack and returns the ten of hearts, which is the best he can do. Rejecting the tempting finesse, you rise with the ace of hearts and lead the jack of clubs, forcing West to win the trick with the queen.

West is now in a hopeless position. He must yield a ruff and discard by leading a diamond or a club, or play a heart and make your queen a trick. Either way you make the contract.

Note that the potential heart finesse never enters the picture once you decide to leave nothing at all to the element of chance.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Thursday, November 22, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You gain reassurances from those in authority. You'll feel more secure, confident and willing to invest in your own special projects. Accent on home, ambition, added responsibility. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio individuals figure in scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on communication, travel, ability to perceive potential. Avoid direct confrontations. You make progress by winning your way, not by attempting to force issues. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles. Publishing project comes into focus.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get legal right-of-way. Financial status of one close to you is elevated. What had been an obstacle becomes a steppingstone to progress. Authority figure supports your efforts. Capricorn, Cancer natives figure prominently—and so does the number 8.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Defer to judgment of one close to you, including partner or mate. One you admire seeks your counsel. Finish rather than initiate project. Aries, Libra individuals are in picture. Spotlight is on marital status.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New approach to tasks at hand proves beneficial. Now is time to renovate, revise and imprint personal style. A dependent is due to become less of a burden. Yes, there will be reason for celebration! Capricorn person figures prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): See places, people as they exist, not merely as you wish they might be. Steer clear of self-deception. Emotions tend to dominate logic—strive to maintain balance. One who aided you in past is due to make reappearance. Follow through on hunch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work with material at hand. Avoid extravagance, perceive potential. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives figure in scenario. Accent on home, family, basic issues. You find way to overcome restrictions. You can now build on solid base.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opportunity exists to rebuild, to settle differences with relative. Short trip could result in firm commitment. Check appointments, calls and resolutions. Another Scorpio plays significant role. Express opinion in frank, sincere manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find ways of "hitting jackpot." Get ideas on paper—protect your own interests. Accent on personal possessions, financial structure and ability to make most of available material. Budget, review, discussion is a necessity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle is such that happiness can replace gloom. Take initiative, exercise independence of thought and action. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Major change occurs in connection with home surroundings. Circumstances turn in favor of your efforts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Aura of glamor, romance exists—secrets, hidden meanings and subtle nuances are featured. You obtain necessary answers by seeking behind the scenes. You'll be more active in connection with institutions, organizations, group and club activities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Relationship "heats up." Elements of pleasure and added responsibility combine. Many events of past may seem to repeat themselves. You now have benefit of experience—take advantage of apparent foreknowledge. Message will become crystal-clear.

IF NOVEMBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY December could be one of your most important months of 1979. Responsibility, money and love become major elements of your personal scenario. You are creative, daring, stubborn and willing to tear down in order to rebuild on a more solid structure. It is likely that you expressed unique ideas, concepts at an early age. You might have been separated from one or both parents while yet a youngster. Scorpio, Leo, Aquarius persons play significant roles in your life. In 1980, lifestyle is transformed. Change of residence might be on agenda.

Full rail-safety probe vowed

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Don Mazankowski has decided to expand a public inquiry into the Mississauga, Ont., train derailment into a full-scale investigation into rail safety across the country.

He told the Commons transport committee Tuesday the terms of reference for the inquiry, after consultation with the government of Ontario, would "cover all areas of rail safety."

The Mississauga derailment forced evacuation of some 250,000 residents of the Toronto suburb after some of the 25 derailed cars exploded and burned and one began leaking poisonous chlorine gas.

A public inquiry into the incident was promised by the Canadian transport commission, responsible for rail safety in Canada. But members of the Commons committee said the commission itself may have been lax in its regulations and safety inspections and would in effect be investigating itself, a possible conflict of interest.

Mazankowski said commission chairman Edgar Benson agreed an independent inquiry might be best and promised full commission co-operation with the inquiry under the Inquiry Act.

The minister said he did not want to undermine the authority of the commission's responsibility for rail safety, nor did he want to over-dramatize the Mississauga mishap.

But he made clear he wants an investigation into rail safety along the lines Mr. Justice Charles Dubin is conducting into air safety. He wanted all the facts to come out.

The minister reacted with anger to statements by Charles Harqual (L—Restigouche) who said rail passengers are entitled to know every precaution is being taken for their safety.

"The rail system didn't break down in the six months since I have taken office," said Mazankowski.

Rather it had been allowed to go down over the last 16 years, he said. Why hadn't Liberal MPs expressed their concern then?

Charlie Turner (L—London East), who two weeks ago warned about the condition of the country's train equipment and safety procedures, said he had been talking about poor safety conditions since 1969 but nobody listened to him.

He said that since he aired his concerns this month, conditions have improved but they are still not good enough.

Turner said Mazankowski should hire more safety inspectors now. He didn't have to wait for the results of a public inquiry.

The minister said he understands the transport commission already had issued interim orders on spacing of rail cars carrying dangerous materials.

Turner said railway workers still don't know what boxcars contain dangerous goods and that accidents are still possible.

He said "the boys back home" want to know what safety precautions are being taken.

Free local phone calls must stay, Fraser says

The provincial government will oppose any attempt by B.C. Tel to replace the present system of free local calls, Transportation and Communications Minister Alex Fraser said today.

Telephone companies, led by Bell Canada, have started promoting the user-pay system for local calls.

Instead of a flat rate, the customer would be charged for the number of calls made and the duration of conversations. A local call would be treated as a long distance call is now.

At present there is no formal application before the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to institute the user-pay concept.

"I can assure you if a formal application is made we will oppose it," Fraser said.

Fraser said he fears the people who would be hardest hit by the user-pay system would be those who can least afford it, and he would oppose it for this reason alone.

He said a glance at the telephone companies' financial statements shows "they aren't really suffering and I don't know why they need to get additional revenue in this manner."

On another matter, Fraser said the future of the ferry Queen of Surrey has not yet been decided. Officials met again late yesterday but failed to reach a conclusion.

Fraser hopes for a decision in a few days on whether the Surrey will be used on the run to Prince Rupert or to replace the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle service.

Mortgages starting to head down

OTTAWA (CP) — Mortgage rates are coming down after being pushed to an all-time high this month and plunging the real estate market to a near-record low in the process.

Guaranty Trust Tuesday became the third mortgage company to drop its rates in as many weeks, following similar decisions by Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. and Montreal Trust.

Guaranty Trust lowered its five-year closed mortgage rate to 14¾ per cent from 15 per cent. Shorter term closed mortgage rates remain unchanged at 15 per cent. Canada Permanent's reduction announced Monday brought their two-to-five-year closed mortgage rate to 14¼ from 14½ per cent.

Mortgage rates offered by Canada Permanent before the reductions were 14¾ per cent for three- and five-year National Housing Act insured mortages.

Montreal Trust initiated the trend to lower mortgage rates by lowering its five-year closed rate to 13.8 per cent from 14½ per cent.

Canuck game boos reverberate in east

MONTREAL (CP) — The booing of a few French bars of O Canada by Vancouver hockey fans was met with indignation by two newspapers in Montreal.

The city's four daily newspapers all mentioned the incident at Sunday's National Hockey League game between the Canucks and Montreal Canadiens in their Monday editions, but The Gazette, the only English-language daily, and La Presse, expressed further comment Tuesday.

"It was a boorish, inexcusable thing to do. It was sick," said columnist Glenn Cole, who covers the hockey beat regularly for The Gazette.

La Presse columnist Rejean Tremblay, meanwhile, questioned the need to continue to sing O Canada prior to sporting events. Listing a number of reasons to support his sentiments, Tremblay said that O Canada is not an official national anthem, and added that it should be played only before international competition.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Clark joined other MPs Tuesday in condemning those who booed the singing.

The prime minister said in the Commons he profoundly regrets the gestures and actions at the game and "I think that one of the things that we can do as members of Parliament is to use both official languages in Vancouver as well as Lachute and Abitibi."

British Columbia Mark Rose (NDP—Mission-Port Moody) said he also regrets the booing.

The incident in Vancouver occurred when many of the 16,413 fans at the Coliseum, hooted after the soloist switched into a few French bars of O Canada, and continued to jeer until English words were heard again.

Tremblay quoted his colleague Bernard Brisset, who was with the Canadiens in Vancouver, as saying: "We were received and treated like dogs by the fans, and had to act nice to them."

Brisset said the Canadiens were deeply hurt by the booing, and the anglophone players in particular felt uncomfortable for their francophone teammates.

Cole noted that on the same evening as the Vancouver incident, fans in Quebec had ignored the urgings by local columnists to boo any time an English announcement was made during the Nordiques' game against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Canucks went on to defeat Montreal 5-2 in the hockey game, the first time Vancouver had beaten the Canadiens at the Coliseum since entering the NHL in 1970.

$150-a-plate to hear Joe Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative party contributors will fork out more than half a million dollars this week to hear speeches by Prime Minister Joe Clark at fund-raising dinners in Toronto and Vancouver.

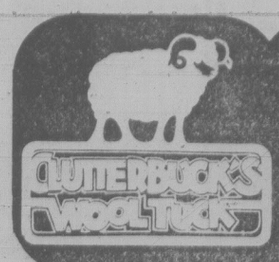

Organizers expect about 2,500 to attend a $150-a-plate dinner tonight at the Harbour Castle Hotel in Toronto — paying a total of $375,000. About 1,200 of the $150 tickets have been sold for a dinner at the Hotel Vancouver Thursday, for a total of $180,000.

Clark leaves for Toronto today after the daily Commons question period. He will spend the night in Toronto and fly to Vancouver Thursday.

Clark will hold his weekly news conference in Vancouver Friday morning and will do a television interview before returning to Ottawa.

Dishwashers: "Wash cycles". Dishwashers are usually available with two to eight cycles. Three cycles are usually sufficient for everyday family needs. Cycles available include short wash, normal wash (approx. 1 hour in duration), pots and pans cycles, rinse and hold cycles, sanitizer and plate warmer cycles, and cycles for china or crystal. Extra cycles, while being convenient, tend to add to the cost of the machine.

Trudeau calls it quits

Trudeau waves after dropping resignation bombshell at Ottawa press conference

Surprise announcement stuns Liberal faithful

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau stunned his own party today by announcing he is quitting as Liberal leader after almost 12 years so the party can "rebuild itself" and win the next election.

The surprise resignation of the 60-year-old Trudeau will likely not be effective until March, his suggested date for a leadership convention.

Trudeau informed Senator Alasdair Graham, Liberal party president, early this morning that he intends to quit. Liberal MPs and senators, gathered for their weekly caucus meeting, were then informed. Some broke into tears and followed Trudeau crying to a hastily-called news conference.

Trudeau told reporters the Liberal party needed to rebuild itself and the best way to achieve that goal is to have "a change in leadership."

But he promised that "wherever I am and whatever I do, I will continue to fight for my country" and will participate actively in the Quebec referendum campaign this spring.

Senator Graham, his voice choked with emotion, said he believed that support for the Liberal party has been growing since the May 22 election that ended 16 years of Liberal rule. He wanted Trudeau to remain as leader.

The national Liberal executive meets in Ottawa this week and will choose the date for the convention.

Former finance minister John Turner declined immediate comment on Trudeau's decision to step down.

Turner, 50, has been mentioned frequently as a possible candidate for the federal Liberal leadership.

Reporters flocked to his downtown Toronto law office immediately after the announcement.

But Turner sent out word that he has nothing to say at this time.

Turner quit the Trudeau cabinet in 1975 without giving a clear reason for his action. In 1976, he resigned from the Commons and later was critical of the Trudeau government's economic policies.

Turner, who became finance minister in 1972, made one of his rare political appearances last weekend at a policy convention of the Ontario branch of the federal Liberals in Toronto.

He stood at the top of an escalator at a downtown hotel and shook hands with dozens of people.

Asked at the time why the Liberals lost the May 22 federal election, he said: "You know as well as I do but you won't hear it from me."

He also said he knows as many people in the Liberal party as any person except perhaps Paul Martin, long-time Liberal cabinet minister and high commissioner to London.

After Turner left the government, he sent a regular newsletter to a selected group of persons from his law office at McMillan and Federalism Trudeau's undoing?

By KITTY MCKINSEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau, the 60-year-old Montreal intellectual who seemed so young when he burst onto the federal scene in 1965, says it's time for someone else to take up his fight against separatism in Quebec.

After years as a vociferous critic of the Liberal party, he came to Ottawa as a Liberal MP in 1965 to show Quebecers they had a place in the federal system.

Ironically, as he leaves federal politics, the separatist threat looms larger than ever and critics say Trudeau exacerbated the situation through his rigid federalist stand and inability to compromise.

In the dying days of the May 22 election Trudeau, still preaching the national unity theme of his first election, was almost begging voters to give him one more chance to deal with Quebec.

That the voters turned instead to boyish rival Joe Clark, a man Trudeau never took seriously, had to be a severe disappointment to a man who's seldom failed at anything in his life.

After his almost chance entrance into politics — the Liberals were chasing Jean Marchand, who wouldn't come to Ottawa without Trudeau and Gerard Pelletier — the Montreal millionaire's son became the darling of the media and of adoring women who showered him with roses and kisses wherever he went.

The swinging bachelor justice minister who wore an ascot and sandals to the Commons and took the state out of the bedrooms of the nation, won the Liberal leadership almost effortlessly in 1968.

His youthful charisma and vague promises of a Just Society coincided perfectly with the optimistic mood sweeping the country the year after the Centennial and Expo '67.

The mercurial Trudeau has always confounded ob-

Anti-U.S. flames race through Moslem world

Times News Services.

A firestorm of anti-U.S. violence raced from Iran to Pakistan today, endangering hundreds of Americans in several Moslem cities. At least one American was killed.

Iranian students said they would kill 49 American hostages and blow up the embassy in Tehran if the United States tried to rescue them by force.

Islam's holiest city, Mecca in Saudi Arabia, also was caught up in the flames when gunmen seized the Grand Mosque.

Shortly after, hundreds of thousands of Islamic militants, chanting "Down with the dog Carter," stormed the American embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, burned the U.S. cultural centre and the American Express building in nearby Rawalpindi, sacked the U.S. consulate in Lahore and attempted to march on the U.S. consulate in Karachi but were turned back.

Mobs also burned the British library in Rawalpindi.

A Marine guard was killed as the Moslems poured into the Islamabad embassy compound and as many as 110 other Americans barricaded themselves in a third-floor vault until they were evacuated from the roof by Pakistani troops.

The troops battled the besiegers, some of whom were armed with rifles and shotguns.

At the cultural centre, students put up posters of Khomeini and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

The U.S. State Department blamed Ayatollah Khomeini for "mischief-making," and President Carter ordered the aircraft carrier Kittyhawk to the Indian Ocean.

Earlier, Carter hinted for the first time the United States might use force to free the hostages in Tehran.

The carrier Midway, also of the Pacific Fleet, is operating in the Arabial Ocean despite completing naval manoeuevres in the area Monday and in Norfolk, Va., the U.S. Atlantic Fleet today was reported reinforcing the "helicopter capability" of the Pacific Fleet.

A spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet said without elaboration, "We are augmenting our helicopter capability in the Pacific Fleet."

He conceded that the Atlantic Fleet doesn't normally become involved with the Pacific operation, but is doing so and the reason appears to be the Iranian situation.

The wave of violence broke out Tuesday on the 1,400th anniversary of the birth of Islam.

Indian affairs revamp

QUEBEC (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp has announced radical changes that will reduce the Indian affairs department to a support agency for 300,000 Indians across Canada.

"A radically different approach to economic development is necessary because . . . we have failed to help Indian people help themselves to create and hold jobs," Epp said in a speech to Indian leaders and department officials.

Text of the speech was released in Ottawa prior to delivery.

Epp also announced increases in annual subsidies for Indian housing to eliminate a chronic backlog of 4,600 new units and 6,000 major repairs. No figure was mentioned but the current subsidy is $12,000 per unit and the federal budget for Indian housing is $40 million this year.

A major housing policy is expected next year.

Gloves off labor urged

By MIKE HUGHES

VANCOUVER — Trade unionists were told Tuesday it is time to take the gloves off in their fight with governments over unemployment and jobless benefits.

Bill Zander, president of the provicial council of carpenters, said organized labor has been "too god-damned political".

"It is time we got off the public relations kick when we make reference to the fat little porkchoppers we elect, like Joe Who?," he told the B.C. Federation of Labor convention. (Other convetion stories on page 3)

Zander told the 850 delegates it is time labor became more forthright in its attacks on the current unemployment situation and recent cutbacks by the Tory government on unemployment insurance beneifts.

"I don't know how you equate human misery in terms of statistics," he said, adding that unemployed people are having to sell their homes and everything else they own.

"I think we have to start mobilizing the unemployed."

"Let's get together and help the bloody issue."

Zander said Prime Minister Joe Clark is to be in Vancouver Thursday "and if we don't give him the invitation he deserves, then we are missing the boat."

This call to action was given a standing ovation.

Clark is to be in Vancouver for a fund-raising dinner.

The delegates approved a 12-point program for continuing the federation's attack on unemployment.

A resolution was also passed giving the federation authority to order the federal government to roll back the latest changes in unemployment insurance benefits and scrap proposals for further cutbacks.

It was also resolved that the federation, in cooperation with the Canadian Labor Congress, intensify its all-out attack on government assaults on the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Bennett shuffling on tippy toe

By JAKE BANKY

No one questions that Premier Bill Bennett's cabinet is overdue for fresh faces and new approaches.

And some weeks ago it had been expected the premier would shake up his ministers thoroughly in the new cabinet announcement expected Friday.

But the indigestion caused by the unappetizing "dirty tricks" affair may well cause Bennett to pass up the political pizza-with-everything and settle instead for a blander diet.

With the "dirty tricks" affair still sputtering away, Bennett cannot afford to add to his troubles by alienating any faction within his government or his party.

He must consolidate, retrench and recover. The boat must not be rocked.

What can be expected then is not the major cabinet reshuffle the government needs but an exercise in pre-Christmas window dressing.

Without pretending to fit all the right pegs into the right holes, here are some educated guesses on what will and — just as important — what will not happen:

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy will not be slapped down for her mishandling of "dirty tricks" in the premier's absence.

She is far too popular with the party and any attempt to put Grace on the skids would bring an immediate upheaval in the Socred power structure.

What is likely is that Bennett will uproot her from human resources, where she has never bloomed, and replant her in tourism, where she thrived in the past.

Although that's a step down in portfolio she will still retain the title of deputy premier, and that's where the real power resides.

Bill Vander Zalm will not be shifted from municipal affairs. Like McCarthy, he is too popular and also is in the middle of a major rewriting of municipal legislation.

Appointing a new minister would mean that project would come unglued.

Bob McClelland likely will not lose his health portfolio. Although McClelland's handling of hospital finances and labor problems gave the NDP much of its most potent ammunition in the May election he probably will remain, if only because Bennett doesn't know what else to do with him.

Jim Hewitt keeps energy because Bennett wants a marionette, not a minister.

Don Phillips retains economic development because the premier is impressed by noise and the illusion of action.

Jim Nielsen keeps consumer affairs for no apparent reason whatsoever.

And Garde Gardom will remain as attorney-general

Unidentified Moslem gunmen attacked the Grand Mosque in Mecca, Islam's holiest shrine, took hundreds of hostages and barricaded themselves in one of the seven minarets.

A Kuwait news agency report said "many people" were killed, including the imam (priest) in charge of the mosque.

Saudi tanks ringed the shrine and helicopters hovered over the area.

There was no word on the gunmen's demands beyond a Saudi report they wanted one of their number "recognized as the promised Messiah."

Today, Saudi troops attacked the mosque and regained control. The attack came on orders of Crown Prince Fahd, who is in Tunis for an Arab League meeting.

Saudi officials would only confirm a Kuwait news agency report that said "The situation is now under control and it is on its way to a final solution."

There were no details and no word on the hostages or death toll.

Unconfirmed reports said the gunmen were Iranian Shiite moslems, but in Tehran, Khomeini said the attack was "the work of criminal American imperialism" and hinted "Zionist agents" were involved.

One report said the Pakistan violence started after a broadcast report that 300 Pakistanis were hostage in the Mecca mosque. The State Department said the report was "ambiguous" and suggested non-Moslem involvement in the incident.

Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq earlier today prayed before a crowd in Rawalpindi that "Allah may bring success to the Moslems of the world."

Khomeini whipped up mammoth anti-U.S. demonstrations across Iran today as part of his campaign to press the U.S. government into surrendering the deposed shah.

Hundreds of thousands chanted "Mar bar shah, mar bar Carter" ("Death to the shah, death to Carter") as they marched in well-organized columns through the streets of Iran's capital.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Iran-Pakistan-Saudi Arabia events looked, at least, like "an extraordinary set of coincidences."

Carter referred to Khomeini's charges of American involvement in the Mecca incident and said, "I would suggest that this is indicative of the mischief-making in the region." He branded Khomeini's charges as "totally false, demagogic, a lie."

The threat of U.S. military action came from the White House. Press secretary Jody Powell said the United States is seeking a peaceful solution through "every available channel" but has "other remedies available." He said that "such remedies are explicitly recognized in the charter of the United Nations," which sanctions military as well as economic and diplomatic action by an aggrieved state.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met in Washington for nearly an hour with about a dozen ambassadors from Moslem countries and afterwards Pakistan ambassador Sultan Muhammad Khan said, "The situation in Pakistan is fully under control. We deeply regret the incident."

Sen. Henry Jackson, (Dem—Wash.) met separately with Vance and said, "They (Iranians) have to know there could be severe retaliatory measures if they slaughter Americans."

Thirteen hostages freed from the embassy were at an air force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, undergoing medical examinations and resting up from their ordeal.

In Ottawa, Iranian Charge d'Affaires Mohammed Hussein Abdeli said Canadians in Iran are in no danger despite reports Iranian students could seize them.

"As I have several times reassured the Canadian people and the Canadian government," Abdeli said, "the Canadian citizens in Iran are not in danger and they are completely safe."

Thank You

"I would like to thank those many people who worked so hard for me, and those who voted for me on Saturday. I pledge to work for all citizens, and all neighborhoods, as Mayor.

Fed exhorted to doff gloves

Colin Snell, of the Greater Vancouver local of the Carpenters' Union, said there have been steady attacks on the unemployment benefit program since 1970.

He said in that year, it only took eight weeks of work to qualify for jobless benefits. Now it takes anywhere from 14 to 20 weeks.

It is now at the point where, with the recent UI restrictions, that 250,000 unemployed are being denied benefits, Snell said.

He said those people are having to resort to welfare in order "to put bread on the table."

Snell said labor's wrath should not be directed only at the federal government. B.C.'s Socred administration deserves some criticism as well.

"All they (B.C.) are doing is running to Ottawa saying that it is going to cost $5 million more in welfare benefits.

"It is time to go on the offensive," Snell said.

"We are in a position where we should be saying, no more cutbacks. Cutbacks should be rolled back and benefits increased."

Snell said until the labor movement mobilizes and puts the heat on governments, the country's major corporations will continue to press for unemployment insurance cutbacks.

Most of the delegates who addressed the convention supported the federation's efforts over the past year in dealing with the unemployment problem.

However, Dick Belfit, of Victoria, a member of the Telecommunications Workers Union, said there were too many inefficiencies.

"Far too many things haven't been carried out," he told delegates.

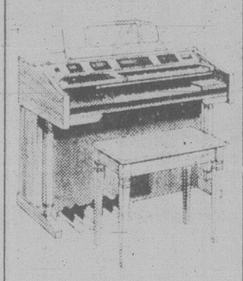

He said the federation had asked affiliated unions to kick in $520,000 in support of the fight against unemployment and only $140,000 was raised. "It's not good enough," Belfit said.

Al Carle, of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said B.C. will have a very serious unemployment problem in six months.

He said the labor movement should be working now to marshall public support for changes in the jobless situation.

"The unemployed now are hidden in a brown government envelope. It is our job to bring them out of that envelope and into the public eye," Carle said.
